Denver, Colorado.
And F. G. Bonfils.
Living One Mile High.
In Pike's Peak Shadow.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 16. DENVER is the biggest city and the capital of Colorado. The fine state capitol, with a dome as fine as that in Washington, D. C., reminds you that this a gold state. It's dome is gilded with 22 karat gold.

YOU stand on the fifteenth step from the top, at the western entrance to the capitol and you are exactly one mile above the ocean's level.

GO ON to Colorado Springs on your way to Pike's Peak and you are two miles above the ocean. Climb the peak or motor up on Mr. Penrose's perfect motor road, and you are nearly three miles above the ocean. Here you live high, and in good health.

HEIGHT makes difference. In Denver the atmospheric pressure on every square inch of your body is 20 per cent less than in New York. This means that your lungs work harder to draw in the oxygen. That is good for them.

A MAN from the East came here many years ago with a $20,000 life insurance policy, sunken cheeks, a sad eye. The insurance experts looked him over, gave him, mentally, six more months to live, offered him $10,000 to cancel his policy. The man accepted, started a furniture business with the money, and is still running it. He's rich, and, says your very "husky" informant, he's huskier than I am.

FRED G. BONFILS owns the Denver Post, and the Denver Post owns Denver, or, at least, it is by long odds the most powerful thing in it. That newspaper blankets half a dozen states, has more circulation than its competitors, more Sunday circulation than all the other Sunday newspapers in Colorado and three states adjoining.

MR. BONFILS does not hesitate to put things plainly. Of the Denver Post, he says, simply "FIRST IN EVERYTHING" and lets it go at that.

IN THE postoffice this morning, you saw an eight and a half pound rainbow trout, just caught, frozen into a solid block of ice. That, says Bonfils, is the kind they catch here. It is no exception. In the little house, next to Buffalo Bill's grave, up on the mountain top, Johnny Baker asks you to stay and eat one just as big.

FOR trout weighing 10 pounds, Bonfils gives a reward of $50, and for eight pound trout, $25. Those big trout eat the little fish, and should be exterminated.

ONCE, in the crater of an extinct volcano, near here, in a government forest, Bonfils watched a band of 200 mountain sheep, a mountain lion sprang from the woods, killed one sheep and its lamb. So Bonfils pays $25 bounty for lions, and has persuaded the State to add $50. At $75 each, mountain lions are vanishing.

MEN came first, to find gold, and on the hill top where Buffalo Bill lies besides his wife, the Indians looked out for ox trains slowly crawling. They saw them, in the clear air, three days before they could arrive, which gave plenty of time to prepare a reception for them.

NOW you see no Indians, but white people, with automobile licenses from every state in the Union, winding up and down 1,000 mountains. You never saw so many mountains. And as you look westward at the great wall of foothills and granite masses beyond, you might start and travel hundreds of miles, and still be mountain climbing.

GOLD is still plentiful, and mills work industriously, pouring the waste into Bear Creek, and Clear Creek, nearby. But gold mining is not what it was. It takes the same amount of gold to get one dollar. Labor and everything used in gold production costs twice what it used to cost. And the dollar you get for your gold is worth only about sixty cents, when you spend it.

BUT Colorado has found in rich soil, industry and water power, greater wealth than was ever in the gold mines. Sugar beets give the state $23,000,000 every year. It takes a good gold mine to do that.

THREE HUNDRED AND NINETY-SEVEN pounds of water will produce a three-pound beet, whereas it takes 554 pounds of water to produce a pound of dry material in potatoes. And sugar beets are a cash crop. The farmer is guaranteed seven dollars a ton, as soon as he dumps the beets near the railroad track. "Dumps" are provided at convenient intervals.

THE beet sugar barons, if there are such, act intelligently. If sugar is dearer, as it will be soon, thanks to earnest Senator Smoot, the beet farmer gets one-half the increase. And the big sugar men compel farmers to diversify crops, to prevent calamity, in case of beet crop failure.

BUT life and health are more important than base gold, or even sugar beets. When Charles Higgins, rugged farmer and fisherman, reached 100, Bonfils gave him a banquet, inviting those in the neighborhood past eighty-five. One hundred came. Their combined ages would have reached back, almost, to the late Stone Age.

EACH centenarian is asked by Bonfils, who makes plenty of money, "what would you like for your birthday?" One dear old lady wrote: "In all my life I never had silk stockings, or nice fancy slippers, and I should like some, also some Baur's candy."

Wild Buying Skyrockets Stocks

PRICES JUMP 2 TO 10 POINTS

Westinghouse Soars to 249½; Big Financial Operators Reported Back in Market

By W. S. COUSINS.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The big buying wave swept over the market again today, carrying prices of the speculative favorites 2 to 10 points higher in one of the most confident movements of the year. The bulls had an unexpected "break" in the weekly report on brokers' loans, which showed a decrease of $68,000,000, instead of the expected increase in speculative borrowings, a change that was easily explained by the increased volume of buying by powerful financial interests.

RUSH OF ORDERS

A heavy accumulation of buying orders before the opening of the market told the story in advance of a "wild" opening in the high-priced favorites in which a large short interest had been built up. Starting the day about 5 points higher, most of these stocks held steadily during the forenoon and advanced to still higher prices in the third hour, under the lead of the utilities, oils and industrials.

Westinghouse led the bulls' procession with a 9-point jump to 249½.

JUMP 3 TO F POINTS

New advances of 3 to 5 points were not rare among any of the well-known market favorites. American Can crossed 180 for the first time, gaining 6 points in an active turn-over. Johns Manville sold up 5 points at 193. Consolidated Gas, at the head of the utilities, advanced 6 points to above 177, the highest price on record, and American and Foreign Power staged a brilliant advance, with its new 5-point run to 141½.

Enthusiastic bulls nominated a dozen or more favorite stocks for the 200-club today, including American Can, Consolidated Gas, Johns Manville and Packard Motor. Even Montgomery Ward and Bethlehem Steel, now selling 75 and 81 points below the 200 mark, are "prominently mentioned" for a place in the group of stocks selling at $200 a share or more.

BUSH BENCHES SHEELY, ADAMS

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Considerably put out over the perforated attack of his Pirates yesterday, Donie Bush today will usher George Grantham and Fred Brickell into action in the third game of the series with the Braves. Earl Sheely and Sparky Adams will leave the lineup to make room for the two lefthand swingers.

The battlefront will undergo a drastic change, Paul Waner moving into first base, Grantham going back to second, Bartell switching back to short and Brickell patrolling the right pasture.

Ervin Brame is down on the books to work on the slab for the Buccos. He probably will be opposed by Harry Seibold.

The Pirates have won two and lost four games on the trip, their disappointing showing being the result of weak hitting and bad fielding in pinches.

John Lawler, Rich and Handsome, Realizes That He Is in Love With Ann Marie Macy

CHAPTER I.

IT was the twenty-third day of December.

Cold-looking gray clouds hung low over the town, and all day long the wind had sung mournfully in the chimneys of the Macy family's old brown shingle house on Pleasant street.

All afternoon, in her big front bedroom, Ann Marie Macy had been hard at work painting Christmas cards.

But it was half past four now, and the early winter twilight was creeping into the room, making the corners of it dark and shadowy.

Ann Marie knew the room by heart—knew it and loved it. It was a little island of beauty in the ugly rambling house with its "body Brussels" carpets, its heavy old-fashioned furniture, its dim full-length mirrors and much-mended lace curtains.

The curtains of Ann Marie's room were dotted white muslin. The dressing table had a frill of white dotted muslin all around it, and so did the four-poster bed.

The walls had been painted pale green, and there were green-and-white braided rugs on the polished floor The ties that held back the curtains were pale-green silk ones. The window seat was heaped with pale green and pale yellow and orange silk cushions.

Anyone with half an eye could see that an artist had planned that room—and, as a matter of fact, Ann Marie was an artist of a sort.

For three years she had been making what she called her "pin money" by painting Christmas cards and Easter cards and birthday greeting cards for her father's book store on Front street.

She leaned back in her chair now and looked thoughtfully at the ones she had been working on all afternoon—big square gray ones with a spray of mistletoe and holly in the upper left-hand corner.

There were a hundred of them. Ann Marie's father had asked her to do them for some last-minute shoppers that noon when he came home for his lunch, and at 1 o'clock Anne Marie had started to work.

"Thank heaven they're finished at last!" she said to herself, adding a few finishing touches to the last card before she laid her brushes down in the glass tray on the window sill beside her.

On the other side of the street, lights were beginning to

SNOOK TO CLAIM PREJUDICE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16.—(INS.)—In the first of their moves to combat the conviction of Dr. James H. Snook, facing execution for the murder of Miss Theora K. Hix, his attorneys announced they would file today or tomorrow morning a motion for a new trial, charging that the jury was prejudiced.

The lawyers, E. O. Ricketts, John F. Seidel and Max Seyfert, said their motion also would cite allegations that at least one juror was unduly influenced by "outside forces," that outbursts of applause were arranged to sway the jury, and that defense counsel did not have adequate time to prepare for trial.

Judge Henry L. Scarlett will pass on the motion Monday. If it is overruled the court at once will sentence the ousted professor to die in the electric chair within 100 days.

SACK MURDER TALE FALSE

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Three hours after Oscar Olson, 29, a Duluth dock worker had confessed to police to slaying Dorothy Aune in Minneapolis last Saturday, Police Chief of Detectives R. E. Donaldson anounced the man had no connection with the murder.

Olson, who was arrested after he had attempted to commit suicide by drowning in a stagnant pool beneath a railroad trestle, was declared by Donaldson to be demented, and had been drinking heavily the past few days.

MISSING TAM FOUND

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Finding of her red tam o' shanter and holding of another suspect who had been acquainted with the girl, today gave police new leads in their search for the slayer of Dorothy Aune.

The tam was missing when Dorothy's body was found near a railroad yard early Wednesday, 14 hours after she had left home. The body was wrapped in two gunny sacks and a cord was around the neck.

The latest suspect to be held was said to have admitted that he knew the Aune girl and that he had taken her to a lake to swim. He refused

MALONE WINS FIRST PLACE ON BALLOT

Mayor Kline's Name to Go In Last Position; Chapman, Miss Grimes Top Council

James F. Malone won first place on the ballot for the Republican ticket for mayor in the drawing held in the County Commissioners' office today. Judge Richard Martin will be second, according to the drawing, and Mayor Charles H. Kline, third.

First position on the ballot is considered to be worth several thousand votes.

T. D. Thomas drew first position on the ticket for controller. Councilman Daniel Winters was second, and Controller H. O. Evans was third.

For Council the Republican ticket will read in this order: T. A. Chapman, Helen Grimes, Roger McKelvey, Harry A. Little, C. B. Connelley, Robert D. Boston, R. J. McGrath, Thomas Ashford, William McClafferty, John A. Fugassi, M. J. Muldowney, William J. Sogst, Thomas D. Malone, M. J. Griffin, Anna Winner, John S. Herron, W. H. Robertson, W. Y. English, Franklin P. Booth, Arthur Hightower, Ervon B. Brenner, Edward M. Hough.

Candidates for other offices drew ballot positions thus:

For Sheriff—Robert S. Cain, Arthur Storer, Clyde S. Edeburn, Frank S. Najierkowski, Albert P. Lorsh, William J. Kane, John (Honus) Wagner, A. W. McMillen, James L. McInerney, Franklin T. McQuaide.

Jury Commissioner—D. O. Ihmsen, Elmer C. Blakeley, William H. Kennedy, Thomas H. Logan, Louis Alpern, Louis Fischer, Lewis L. Doyle, A. Will, J. L. Donner, Joe A. Hogle, James N. Moore, Daniel C. Battle, William H. Reese.

Christ McCormick, of the Twenty-second Ward, withdrew in favor of Moore.

The only fight in the Democratic party, that of jury commissioner, brought out the candidates in this order: Thomas H. Hester, Samuel Richards, Thomas A. Dougherty.

Mrs. McCormick to Seek Senate Seat

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The Herald and Examiner said today that "sources close to her" had revealed that Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Illinois congresswoman-at-large, had decided to oppose Senator Charles S. Deneen for the senatorial nomination in next April's Republican primary election. The newspaper stated that Mrs. McCormick probably would announce her candidacy next Thursday at the Republican day ceremonies at the state fair in Springfield.

MELLON STAYS UNTIL MARCH

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—In the face of further published reports of his impending resignation, word came from sources close to Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon today that he intends to remain in the Hoover cabinet until March 4 next, at least, and will continue longer if he keeps his health and is even mildly urged to do so by the President.

The latest reports originated in New York and had it that Mr. Mellon's retirement, scheduled for an early date, would be followed with the appointment of Ambassador Dwight Morrow, of Mexico, partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company. The reports have come to be chronic in Washington, coming at such regular intervals that friends of the Treasury Department head have expressed curiosity as to their persistent source.

Not only will there be no immediate vacancy in this important post, according to authoritative information, but when one does come, the President will invite Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, to assume the Mellon mantle.

OUTSTANDING FINANCIER

The Robinson choice was made months ago, Hoover intimates assert, and there has been nothing, it is said, to change the President's mind. The California financier is one of the closest, if not the very closest, personal and political friends Mr. Hoover has either in private or public life. It is known that he had more to do with pick-

HUMES RENEWS WAR ON DRYS

"Startling misconduct by government officials" was again charged today by E. Lowry Humes, former United States attorney, in a formal statement replying to one issued by John D. Meyer, present holder of the office.

In Federal Court yesterday Humes charged Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington, Constable Edward Brubach and others with using fraudulent search warrants in searching the houses of persons suspected of violating the prohibition law. Meyer answered that constables and search warrants issued by justices of the peace were used by Pennington because the greater difficulties that had to be overcome before federal search warrants could be obtained.

MEYER DEFENDS PLAN

Meyer said further that constables were used under "a very carefully drawn method of procedure," adopted as the result of a conference he had with Pennington. Under this plan, Meyer said, federal agents accompanied the constables only as "observers," and the liquor obtained by the constables in such raids was turned over to the county evidence custodian.

Humes, in reply, called attention to testimony by federal prohibition

GRAF ACROSS EUROPE; DODGES STORM

Dirigible Maintains Amazing Speed—Flies Over Ural Mountains in Siberia

(Copyright, 1929, by International News Service.)

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 16.—(By radio to International News Service)—The Graf Zeppelin crossed the Ural mountains this afternoon and at 6:00 p. m. (11:00 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight saving time) the airship was between 100 and 150 miles east of the Siberian border.

At 6 o'clock the Graf was about 150 miles north of Tiumen, between Ekaterinburg and Tobolsk.

Tiumen lies on the trans-Siberian railway.

The Graf passed near historic ground, for it was at Ekaterinburg that the former Czar and his family were slain by Communists in 1928 after the Russian revolution.

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16.—The huge Graf Zeppelin flitted like a phantom across Siberia today.

Before soaring over Asia, she was sighted at Viatka, Northern Russia, 500 miles northwest of this city, at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 Pittsburgh time), according to a wireless message received just before noon.

The Graf's position was reckoned at the forty-eighth degree of longitude at that time. She had picked up speed and was heading due east.

Apparently Dr. Hugo Eckener, the commander, was changing his course and was bending back to the trans-Siberian Railway route, as Viatka is on that railroad.

Viatka reported good weather in that district with little wind.

Radiogram Received

A radiogram from the Graf Zeppelin at noon said that the voyage was proceeding with the utmost satisfaction and that all aboard were well.

Owing to reports of a violent storm over Mid-Siberia, Dr. Eckener was forced to veer to the north of Moscow, thus disappointing the thousands who had anticipated a glimpse of the Zeppelin.

Dr. Eckener revealed his decision not to pass over Moscow in a radio message to the German embassy here at 3:30 a. m. (9:30 p. m. Thursday, Pittsburgh time).

At that time the Zeppelin was over the town of Ustizhna, about 225 miles north of this city. It was making good speed and continuing on a a northeast course headed for Vologda, about 275 miles north and slightly to the east of Moscow.

Maintains Speed

When over Ustizhna, the Graf had been in the air just five minutes less than 22 hours since leaving Friedrichshafen at 4:35 a. m. Thursday.

During that time she had maintained an average speed of between 60 and 70 miles an hour. Ustizhna is about 1,350 miles from Friedrichshafen on a bee-line but in the course taken by the Graf, she covered well over 1,500 miles.

Having come up over Germany, across Lithuania and Latvia into Soviet territory, some 5,000 miles of dangerous going, most of it across the un-agents that they had actively participated in a raid conducted by Brubach on the house of Michael Ventrona, 1622 Methyl street, Beechview, on April 20, 1928, and had taken possession of the liquor found there.

HUMES CITES TESTIMONY

Humes also gave out excerpts from federal agents' testimony to the effect that the search warrant used by Brubach in the raid on Ventrona's house, purporting to have been issued by Justice of the Peace E. M. Cox, of Homestead, was actually prepared in Pennington's office without Cox's knowing anything about the case.

"The statement of Mr. Meyer that he would welcome my furnishing him with information establishing these facts is puerile," said Humes, "in view of the fact that the record in this case is an official court record in the United States Court, and that a copy of this testimony is a part of the official file of his office.

"Prosecutions in the Federal Court can only be instituted upon initiation by the United States attorney and Mr. Meyer has available all of the facilities of the federal government and needs no further information than can be made available to him from his own office and from his own investigators, if he has any disposition to uphold and protect the rights of the people of this district.

"JUDGE SHOCKED"

"That he has no such disposition is evidenced by the fact that only recently a federal judge, shocked at the illegal and unlawful conduct of prohibition agents, declared from the bench that it was the duty of the United States attorney to indict the prohibition agents involved. Yet this demand of the court fell upon the deaf ears of the United States attorney and he threw the mantle of his protection around these agents.

"The people of this district can not hope for the protection secured to them by the fourth and fifth amendments to the Constitution until after the inauguration of a United States attorney who will not sit in conference with government agents or other persons, as Mr. Meyer confesses having done, for the purpose of devising schemes and methods by which the Constiution of the United States, which they are sworn to uphold and defend, may be circumvented."

Pennington continued today to maintain silence as to Hume's charges.

Lucky Bucks—New Money for Old

By LUCKY BUCK

What ho! Folks, I hit the road again yesterday. What's more, I stuck to it until I had reached and passed through Greensburg, Connellsville, Uniontown, Brownsville and Washington.

I'll bet Lucky Bucks against dimes that they's still wiping the dust out of their eyes out that way. Anyhow, here's the tale.

I dropped up towards Greensburg and decided a few gasolines wouldn't do much harm. So I blew in on the Gulf Refining station at the corner of Pittsburgh and Otterman streets, Greensburg, and ordered cylinder juice and oil, handed a good-lookin' blonde kid Lucky Buck No. N81070651D, and blew out again. A joy it was to see his beaming morning face as he doled me out the gas; a laugh it gave me to think what he held in his mitt without knowing it.

And so to Uniontown, where I deposited all of a Benevolent Bean at The Fair, where a man tried to sell me shirts when all I wanted was a belt for my bathing suit. They're after business in Uniontown, you bet. Muggsy Ferris, incidentally, wasn't around at the time I visited his burg, so I couldn't congratulate him in person for winning the first Fortunate Fish out of that town.

Among sights to be seen in that fair spot is a statue of Lafayette on the court house lawn, gilded. I like that touch of sentiment, folks.

Before I reached Uniontown, of course, I had to stop in Connellsville—a good place to eat lunch. The Colonial Restaurant attracted me, so I dropped in for a good feed. At first I didn't know what to make of that place—129 N. Pittsburgh street—with its butcher shop, drug store, soda fountain, and restaurant in one room, but the food was plenty good, if you see what I mean. I asked the waitress where the hardware department was, but she didn't take kindly to that crack, so I shut down on the curiosity, ate my lunch, and departed, leaving behind me Lucky Buck No. B21749307D.

Brownsville is a nice little town, isn't it, folks? That was my impression as I socked down Lucky Buck No. X72944761D at a little drug store—Goss's, I think—on Market street, in exchange for some smokes. Yes, sir, Brownsville's done its founders proud.

By the way, that word proud reminds me of poor Brother Wehrheim, who runs the confectionery at 3763 Bigelow boulevard. You remember that I left a Fortunate Simoleon with him Monday, don't you? Well, anyhow, when I talked about it Tuesday, this bozo gets hold of a Sun-Telegraph and listens in; then he starts a frantic search for Lucky Bucks. By the time he found he'd passed it on to the baker or the milk man, the neighbors start porin' in to get fins changed. All the five-dollar bills he received that day'd stretch from here to there, according to Wehrheim, who all the time softly dropped tears over the grave of his fond hopes of cashing in. That's a good laugh!

But where are the holders of the two Lucky Bucks passed at the Pitt theater box office yesterday? It's a big laugh I have on the holders of those bills, it is. Thought they'd be in on bicycles long before now, but nary a bicycle do I see.

In spite of their failure, we must congratulate Edward A. Kern, 335 East Twenty-second street, Munhall, on finding the Lucky Buck I left in the grocery store on Sigert street. Ed picked it up at the Kroger store, of which he's manager, at 1428 Swissvale avenue, Wilkinsburg. Lucky Buck No. E97791B brought him fifty rocks, after his wife had forced him to inspect the smakrers in his store. Ho-hum!

POLITICAL ROW OVER ROOMS WAXES HOT

'Trick' in Getting Camp in G.O.P. Old Stand Denied as Renter Talks State Ticket

Councilman James F. Malone, mayoralty candidate, does not have headquarters in Hotel Henry. His headquarters, apparently, are in the William Penn Hotel, in spite of the announcement that they are in the hotel next to the Mellon National Bank.

The chronological story runs:

Tuesday, 5 p. m.—Alderman Thomas Flanigan, First Ward, alleged Malone supporter, passes around the word that the headquarters will be in the Henry.

Wednesday, 9 a. m.—Malone lieutenants tell every reporter in sight their headquarters are in the Henry.

Wednesday, 10 a. m.—Howard M. Johnson, secretary to Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon and in charge of the renting of the hotel, denies emphatically that Malone has his headquarters there.

Wednesday, 11 a. m.—Malone lieutenants invite every reporter in sight to visit their headquarters in the Henry.

Wednesday, 11:30 a. m.—Johnson states that, upon investigation, he finds that the Malone faction has secured headquarters by a "trick," the rooms having been rented by J. Boyd Euwer, who claimed to represent "the Republican organization."

Thursday, 10 a. m.—Malone lieutenants insist that their headquarters are in the Henry Hotel.

Thursday, 10 a. m.—Inquiring reporter discovers that Malone had rented headquarters in the William Penn Hotel.

Thursday, 3 p. m.—Euwer stated that he did not rent the rooms by a trick, that they were not for Malone, but for the state ticket and judges.

CHICKEN THIEF GETS 2 YEARS

Two to four years in the workhouse for stealing chickens—four sacks full, containing a total of 43 chickens and three geese—was the sentence imposed by Judge Harry H. Rowand in Criminal Court on Henry Williams, Negro, 37, of West Carson street, when he pleaded guilty to the charge.

"You seem to like chickens," observed Judge Rowand.

"Well, it was this way," grinned Williams. "I didn't 'zactly steal 'em. Dey was another feller done that and I was with him."

Chief of Police Chris Keisling, of Carnegie, testified to arresting Williams in Chartiers street, Carnegie, July 3, with four sacks of chickens. He said Williams had been arrested before for the same offense. He said 23 chickens and three geese had been taken from the coop of Harry Balitsky and 20 chickens from the coop of John Zanbilla, both of Prestley avenue, Collier Township.

ing the present cabinet than all other friends of Mr. Hoover combined. He did most of the confidential scouting for ministerial timber. He investigated qualifications of the men seriously considered and he made recommendations that were heeded as were the recommendations of no other confidant of Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Robinson, who, incidentally, was a member of the Dawes commission and who has long been the outstanding financier of the West Coast, could have gone into the original Hoover cabinet as secretary of the treasury, it is known. Mr. Mellon was not invited to remain until it was found that the Californian could not afford to enter public life just then. He has some highly important bank merger negotiations pending in Los Angeles, or had when the cabinet was forming and he did not feel free for at least a year to assume cabinet responsibilities. If, around March 4, 1930, Mr. Mellon shows an inclination to resign, he will receive the Hoover blessing and be allowed to go. Mr. Robinson will step in as matters stand. From time to time in the last few months reports have been in circulation that Secretary Mellon was about to get out. Each time they have had repercussions in Wall street. Generally they started there.

REPORTS STIR MARKET

One or twice the "market" has been shaken by these rumors and brokers wires connecting with their Washington offices have been kept hot with demands for the "inside" and the "low down."

The financial interest of the country and many other interests, too, still look upon Mr. Mellon as the most important figure in the federal government, after the President himself. It was the existence of that conviction, however, that induced the President to keep Mr. Mellon, a man with whom the Hoover relations were none too intimate. The secretary was absent from Washington yesterday and so could not deny in person the stories that he was about to make way for Mr. Morrow. But A. E. Sixsmith, his confidential secretary, was in Washington, and was twice in communication with his chief.

"There is absolutely nothing to this report of Mr. Mellon's resignation," Mr. Sixsmith said. "Mr. Mellon is not in the city, but I have talked with him twice today and I can say positively that these reports are without any foundation whatever."

In this general connection it can be stated that there is at present no thought on the part of the President of making any change of ambassadors in Mexico City. Mr. Hoover would like Mr. Morrow to remain there for another year or perhaps two in order further to assist in working out Mexico's problems. It is said here that Mr. Morrow is entirely pleased with that prospect.

SOVIET, CHINA FORCES IN CLASH

Situation Along Manchurian Frontier Continues More Serious; Troops Massing

International News Service.

TOKIO, Aug. 16.—The Chinese-Russian embroglio on the Siberia-Manchurian frontier is becoming more serious hourly, advices received here today indicated.

Sharp clashes between Chinese and Soviet troops were reported at several points. Several border towns were reported to have been occupied by Russian troops.

Soviet gunboats were reported to have made several attacks upon Chinese troop encampments on the Sungari River.

Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang, Manchurian war lord, has ordered three brigades of well-equipped Mukden troops to the frontier to reinforce weak spots in the Chinese lines and guard strategic points along the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Meanwhile the Russians are reported to be massing their forces along the border for the purpose of staging a general offensive within a week.

A force of 500 Chinese infantrymen and 200 cavalry are now isolated by sudden floods of the Heiho and Mergen Rivers. The troops were guarding an important position between the rivers when the floods occurred. According to last reports received here, they were entirely cut off from communication from the main Chinese force and were facing possible starvation.

BUT, you cannot tell about Denver, Colorado and Bonfils, all in one article. Another, tomorrow, is necessary. It will tell you that advertising made Pike's Peak, how to catch the very biggest trout, with live mice, and some other things. Denver is the best city between Kansas City on the east, and San Francisco on the west. Going north and south, it is the biggest city between the North Pole and Mexico City. And its park system eclipses by 1,000 per cent and more, that of any city on earth. All that requires space, to say nothing of the dinosaur tracks on the way to Echo Lake.

DR. EMPRINGHAM, ACCUSED AS MEDICAL FAKE, VANIS

DISCIPLINING BY CHURCH URGED

Minister Accused in Clinic Inquiry Declared 'Broke And Hounded by Creditors'

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Rev. Dr. James Empringham, former national secretary of the Church Temperance Society of the Episcopal Church, who is accused of practicing medicine illegally as the head of a now defunct "health institute," has vanished.

Dr. Empringham was recently in Reno, Nev., seeking a divorce on grounds of desertion from Ethel M. Empringham and the custody of a child, James Empringham. He is now reported to be "somewhere" on the Pacific coast.

Health department officials today indicated they would call upon United States Attorney Charles S. Tuttle to discuss the possibility of having Dr. Empringham returned to this jurisdiction.

BEYOND EXTRADITION

"The matter is 'status quo' as far as our office is concerned," said Sol Ullman, deputy attorney general, acting for the State Board of Medical Examiners. "He is out of our jurisdiction.

"We cannot extradite him as the charge against him is only a misdemeanor. If he returned to New York state and if witnesses were available we could proceed toward forcing him to face the charges of running a health institute without a license."

One of the main reasons why Dr. Empringham does not return to New York is because he is "broke and hounded by creditors," according to Dr. John J. Van Horne, who was formerly medical director of the Health Educational Society. He characterized Dr. Empringham as "an honest man at heart and a prince of good fellows. It is unfair for his creditors to charge that he practiced medicine illegally."

CHURCH DISCIPLINE

Ecclesiastical recriminations are reported to have followed upon Dr. Empringham's difficulty. It is rumored that already a powerful unit in the Episcopal hierarchy has asked Bishop William T. Manning to discipline him. The bishop is now at his summer home in Maine.

The charges against Dr. Empringham grew out of complaints of former patients of a "health institute" which he operated in St. Nicholas avenue. The institute was closed in February by the board of health after a score of complaints against it had been lodged by patients who were not satisfied with the efficacy of the doctor's regimen. Among other things, it is alleged, Dr. Empringham made physical examinations, although not a licensed physician.

'GHOST' ABSENT FROM ORGAN

Had the "ghost" organist of the Church of the Ascension, Ellsworth avenue and Neville street, returned "in person" last midnight or early this morning, he would have been welcomed by hundreds. "He" would have had a record-breaking audience for his weird concert, and a hushed and attentive one.

For throngs of men and women, in automobiles and on foot, halted silently before the austere old stone edifice from 11 p. m. until 4 a. m. today. They waited to hear the eerie strains that, believed to come from some unworldly musician playing on the Ascension's pipes, has stirred the residents of the neighborhood for several weeks. They waited in shivers, and in rain.

While John G. Lawton, auditor of the church, stated that there has been no organist in the church, since the three that could play there are at least hundreds of miles away, one in Italy, those who have heard the strange music from the dark church deny that it was radio music. Mr. Lawton suggested that was a radio tuned in on the Mormon church organ in Salt Lake City. He asserted that had it been the organ of the Ellsworth avenue church, those hearing it would have also heard the motor noises from the basement, necessary in propelling the air through the big pipes.

Several of the score or more who had heard the concert of hymns on successive nights several weeks ago, and a five-minute concert a week ago, admitted that they had heard no sound of the motor. Additional hearers of the organ music, residents of the Cathedral Mansions, were Ora Metcalf, Dr. Arthur Fuller and Miss Sue Kelly.

A slight break was noted last night in the hitherto enchanting picture of mystery. This was caused by a vigil lamp, lighted all night in the church. Previously the big church had remained dark.

Those who believe that a strange organist, real or supernatural, actually played the church organ were certain that the crowds of visitors would prevent his return. But they still are hoping.

MAURETANIA AT SEA FOR RECORD

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Victor and vanquished in the competition for trans-Atlantic shipping speed records will pass each other Sunday morning when the Cunard liner Mauretania, former blue ribbon holder, and the North German Lloyd Bremen, present "champion," will cross paths in midocean. The Mauretania is bound from this port to Europe; the Bremen is coming this way on her second voyage.

The Mauretania passed out to sea this morning. She had no sooner left the crowded shipping of the harbor than Capt. S. G. S. McNeil ordered the engines speeded up. With good weather in his favor, Capt. McNeil is going to make a gallant effort to equal the Bremen's time with his 23-year-old ship.

The Bremen's westbound record, made on her maiden voyage, is four days 17 hours and 42 minutes. Her eastbound record, made on the return voyage, is four days 14 hours 30 minutes, New York to Southampton, England.

When the car in which she was riding skidded she jumped and was caught between a telephone pole and the door.

DISTANCE-FUEL FLIGHT ON

MILLS FIELD, San Francisco, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—After making two successful refueling contacts, the Sun God, with its pilots, Nick Mamer and Art Walker, roared away on the second leg of its flight today.

The big Buhl biplane arrived over Mills Field at 4:03 this morning, having flown from Spokane in approximately 10 hours.

Arriving before dawn, the Sun God flew in wide circles over the field until there was daylight enough for the "nurse" ship to go aloft for the first contact.

The Sun God left after making but two contacts, instead of the expected three. It left here at 7:30 a. m., after taking 180 gallons of gasoline aboard.

The Californian, the "nurse ship," will load up once more and start in pursuit of the plane headed for Cheyenne. If the latter wants an additional supply of fuel, the transfer will be made en route.

As it will take from eight to ten hours for the Sun God to reach the Wyoming city, the fliers made a hurried departure from here that they might have daylight for refueling there.

DONOHOE SLAIN IN MASONTOWN, JONES' THEORY

'Brick House' Believed Scene Of Murder Being Watched; More Light on Booze Ring

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 15.—Authorities investigating the murder of former Constable John Donohoe are convinced the actual slaying took place in a "brick house" in Masontown and the body was taken to a point near Old Frame, where it was abandoned. Special Prosecutor A. E. Jones said the house has been under surveillance for days.

Report that habeas corpus action would be taken to obtain the release of Glenn Allum, one of the suspects held by the State Police, was denied by Attorney Wade K. Newell, retained by Mrs. Allum. Newell declared himself convinced of Allum's innocence, but said he would make no move to embarrass the investigators.

ARRESTS

Sam Spinella and Ben Bergie, onetime "key men," have been arrested on liquor charges. They were connected with the Connellsville "slaughter house still," police assert.

Frank Dufour, Jr., Pt. Marion man, now serving a term in the workhouse, was brought to Uniontown for questioning and is said to have given important information concerning bootlegging activities, but nothing concerning the Donohoe slaying.

SCOUTS GUESTS AT WINDSOR

Eagle Scout Clark B. Johnston, of Crafton, who has received many honors as an ideal Scout, is reporting details of the International jamboree at Birkenhead, England, for the Pittsburgh-Sun-Telegraph. His cabled news reports are being published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

By CLARK B. JOHNSTON,
Eagle Scout
Correspondent, Sun-Telegraph

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Accompanying 170 Boy Scouts, the Pittsburgh Bulldog Patrol yesterday visited the royal residence at Windsor Castle. A boat ride down the Thames took the party to Windsor, where we lunched at a hotel which was originally the home of Sir Christopher Wren. Later a guide took us through the castle. The great halls, hung with armor, swords and other medieval implements of warfare made quite an impression. Morris Rosenbloom tried to make a trade for a suit of mail, but failed.

Two "bobbies" had to come to the rescue of a castle sentry, dressed in red uniform with bearskin in headdress. Thirty scouts backed him to the wall and took photographs of the dazed attendant, who lost both his composure and dignity.

The boys then went to Eton College, to view its century-old desks and whipping post, and to read the names of hundreds of scholars which have been carved on the wooden walls.

William Knotts summed up the Bulldogs' opinion of London, declaring it to be "some place."

Boy Scouts who are interested—and all of the thousands in Western Pennsylvania are interested—in this biggest event in the history of Scoutdom will find exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph news written for them by one of their own Scouts. Scout Johnston will feature the news which he as a Scout knows will be of special interest to Scouts here. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for his articles.

GIRL, 12, HELD IN CHUM'S DEATH

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 16.—Genevieve Rich, 12, was held today as a material witness for the inquest in the fatal shooting of Olga Zemach, 7, who was killed Wednesday because she was "too small to play with grownup girls."

District Attorney J. Elder Bryan ordered the girl detained. She was placed in custody of Juvenile Court officers.

The inquest will be held tomorrow. It will follow by a few hours the funeral of the dead girl.

Genevieve, Olga and Stefinia Zemack, sister of the dead girl, were playing in the Rich automobile. Thomas Rich, a brother had left his rifle in the machine and this was found by the children.

Olga insisted on playing with the others, but was told she was too small to play with "grownup girls." In attempting to frighten Olga away, the Rich girl said, the gun, brandished, was discharged.

The wounded girl was rushed to the hospital, where she died last night.

The Rich girl told authorities she did not know the rifle was loaded. She said she was "just trying to scare" the younger child.

As sorrow entered the adjoining homes in Cascade street, the father of Genevieve went to the Kemack residence to offer comfort and assistance, taking flowers. According to Rich, his efforts to console the grieved family were refused and he was ordered from the house.

GRAF GUE STIRRED BY OVATIONS

Lady Hay Describes Thrill Of Welcomes Sent Up by Every City on New Route

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY,
Only woman passenger on Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 16. — (Via Norddeich Radio).—Berlin's streets were black with people. The city thrilled all those who are making their first trip aboard the dirigible, but the rest of us rather missed the usual boisterous welcome scenes and whistles.

The capital was exceptionally impressive and beautiful from the air under the sunlight.

Noon gilded Stettin, the birthplace of Capt. Flemming, who was touched at the idea of saluting his native town, on this special day.

During luncheon the clouds were gathering ahead, but Dr. Eckener, by whose side I was sitting, explained to me:

"We are passing through low pressure area."

But he also promised that the historic free city of Danzig soon would be revealed. Sure enough, the weather wizard was right, as always.

Danzig Like Map

Danzig soon lay beneath us, as clearly defined as a map, while the German population frantically waved and cheered and sirens screamed and whistles blew in unrestrained excitement and rejoicing such as rarely accorded the Graf.

No matter how frequently the cities on our route render the courtesy of an areoplane escort it is always fascinating and a graceful, moving sight to watch the machines curve and caracole in their aerial greeting.

After the Danzig planes left us our way lay over the grey Baltic. Our last glance at the "Free City" showed the highlights of the city glittering in the sun through the Northern Sea mists, a placid wide river on which was floating timber from Poland to sea, the treacherous marshlands fringing the gleaming white seashore which seem to stretch indefinitely from right to left.

Suitable Run

Now we are heading inland to Dunsberg on the Russian frontier over a country thick with forests and scattered towns and villages. The Graf Zeppelin is making 60 miles an hour on four motors, with a satisfactory day's run to her credit.

Commander Eckener and his officers are in the best of humor in the control room, relaxed and happy though, naturally, they are keenly alert and watchful.

Most of the passengers are sleeping in their cabins. A few are dosing in the salon. Kharklin, the Russian, is sleepless and alert. There is no tension anywhere, but there is ever increasing interest and keyed up anticipation of Siberia, the white Arctic mystery land.

Stand by Windows

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 15.—(Dropped at Berlin.)—From 4:34 o'clock, when we rose from the ground, until 7 o'clock, when the first tinkle of teacups announced a welcome breakfast, the passengers could not tear themselves away from the windows.

How quickly they are declaring themselves! Even Leeds and Rickard, both young and full of the high spirits of adventure and the joy of life, could not pit their gramaphone for long against the massed company of all these learned professors and technical experts who form the major part of the passenger list.

But even the great must eat; Bread, butter, tea, coffee and sausages help digest many a complicated observation. The cameramen, Robert Hartmann and Baron Von Perckhammer, the art photographer, worked with evergreen enthusiasm. Capt. Lehmann, sighting the baron's unconventional attire of baggy gold breeches to the knee and heavy shoes and no socks, remarked thoughtfully:

Discusses Clothes

"I would like to see all the passengers dress in evening dress for dinner, as on steamships. Perhaps, when we inaugurate a regular schedule of passenger trans-Atlantic flights, they will do that and help make the tiny salon festive."

I reminded him that only Europeans don evening clothes every night for dinner by routine habit. American men do not like doing it.

Sir Hubert Wilkins is dreaming by the window and Karl Von Wiegand is working faster than ever on his dispatch to be dropped off with this at Berlin. The Japanese, Drs. Enti and Kitano, are hammering the Western keyboards of their typewriters. I do not know why, but it does seem rather strange to watch the Japanese, whose language we all know to be so complicated, writing as fast as anyone else, in English on the typewriter.

Japanese Alert

The Japanese have been very alert and busy this morning. Com-

This ...AF CROSSES VOLGA; VEERS NORTH TO AVOID STORM

...ENER SORRY HE MUST MISS MOSCOW

Von Wiegand Describes Wild Scenes as Dirigible Sails Over Germany and Poland

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,

World-renowned newspaper correspondent, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin on its first trans-Atlantic cruise, and who is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEEPELIN, Aug. 16.—(Via Norddeich Radio) — We crossed the Volga, the famous Volga, at 1 o'clock this morning.

We crossed the Russian border, just about 10 miles south of Dunaberg (Vinsk), at 2:45 p. m., Eastern daylight time, and before us were making 67 miles an hour. This was 8:45 p. m., local time, and before us there was a big moon and a clear sky. We were heading for Moscow, but Dr. Eckener warned that weather reports indicated a storm ahead in mid-Siberia and intimated that we might be forced into the Arctic regions to avoid it.

Changes Course

Dr. Eckener suddenly changed his course at midnight, from Moscow to the northeast, which leaves Moscow approximately 200 miles to the south of us. He said:

"I deeply regret I cannot meet the wishes of the Soviet government, but Moscow and other points report headwinds.

"It is such a long flight I cannot assume the responsibility of deliberately and knowingly heading into contrary winds, which would mean retarding us many hours.

"Therefore, I am deviating back to the upper edge of the high pressure area, now about 120 kilometers away. Our ground speed is about 74 miles an hour."

The streets of Berlin were so filled with people that it looked like an anthill to us. Danzig seemed to go frantic; Koenigsberg, too, gave us a royal welcome.

Dr. Eckener appeared to be deeply touched with the greetings in East Prussia, severed from Germany by a Polish corridor after the war.

We passed over Koenigsberg at about 11:15 a. m., New York daylight saving time, and over Tilsit, in East Prussia, at noon, New York time.

Graf Makes Good

The Graf Zeppelin, as if knowing that the eyes of the world are upon it, made good once more on the first day of the second lap in the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight.

In the first 12 hours, from the departure at Friedrichshafen until we passed over Koenigsberg this afternoon, the Graf Zeppelin made a very satisfactory run of approximately 750 miles, with only four motors, at an average speed of about 62 miles an hour.

"I am satisfied with today's run which, having little or no helping wind, was good on four motors," said Commander Eckener, as we stood on the bridge together while passing over Koenigsberg. "Of course," he continued, "I would have liked the speed we made coming from New York, but we cannot expect that every day."

Just as we entered the Polish Corridor, the ship was rocking softly in the gusty winds. When we reached Stettin, the wind turned to the east and we took it on the side. Sir Hubert Wilkins remarked:

"It rocks just enough to make it interesting."

Two Miss Lunch

We had an excellent luncheon. Commander Eckener, at the captain's table, has Lady Drummond Hay, Dr. Megias, Wilkins, Leeds and Rickard. The last named two, however, did not show up, being still asleep.

Stettin, below us on the Baltic, is laid out geometrically to the smallest areaway, and forms an unusually pretty picture for us as we pass speedily above, trying to head into the wind. Although we have only four motors working, the ship is making almost regular cruising speed, and Dr. Eckener is confident the trip will be shorter than at first calculated. We have made good progress this morning.

Wilkins has been sitting all morning on the window ledge, watching the beautiful landscape of Middle Germany reel off below like a film. Occasionally, taps the typewriter in front of him. Lady Hay, as usual, has disappeared in her cabin and is busily at work tapping out the story of the flight.

Air Is Cool

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, August 15 (dropped with mail at Berlin).—Of the new passengers who "en-Zeppelined" at Freidrichshafen, the Russian professor, Karklin, and the Swiss Lieutenant-Colonel Iselin are busy writing souvenir postals.

Up here (while I am writing a few paragraphs to be dropped at Berlin before getting in touch with the Norddeich radio station as we come to Stettin) at 2,500 feet, it is rather cool, but Capt. Lehmann says we are soon going down to 1,000 feet.

We pass over Leipsic at 9:05 a. m. (4:05 o'clock New York daylight time). The streets are black with people. The wind has shifted, and instead of helping push us along, it has now swung around to the front and is trying to hold us back. But it is not strong, and we are still making good headway with only four motors.

Dr. Seilkopf, working on the weather maps in the navigation room, tells me he expects another shift of wind when we reach Berlin. This may be more helpful.

Half the passengers have gone to bed for rest. I am going to follow their example after we touch Berlin. In fact, if the passengers and officers were asked what they most think of at the moment, nearly all would answer "sleep."

Observing Schedule

The Graf is beginning to make its departures almost on a railway schedule. Dr. Eckener said we would hop off at 4:30 and it was 4:34 when the roar of five motors told us all at the windows that we had started on our long second lap of this round-world venture. We waved as long as we could see the cheering crowd below, but that wasn't long.

"Next stop, Tokio!" shouted Capt. Von Schiller, coming into the lounge from the bridge. Capt. Lehmann came from the rear, all smiles, with:

"The ship's a bit heavy and inclined to sag through the air, but that won't be for long."

Capt. Flemming is in command on the bridge with Dr. Eckener by his side and Knut Eckener on the elevator wheel. In the wireless room are Chief Operator Dumke and Operators Speck and Freund. Up to nearly 8 o'clock, they were forbidden to touch the key, because the ship was blowing off gas from the ballonets and therefore Dr. Eckener wanted no sparks flying from the antenna.

Music in Air

Dawn broke with beautiful pastel shades in the East. Soon, the sunred ball peeped at us over the edge of the white fog coverlet that spread like a thick veil over part of the ground.

Leeds started his gramophone. He remarked:

"They took it off; said I couldn't take it along because it was taking weight away from the ship. But I'm glad they brought it back."

I told him that jazz, at 5 o'clock in the morning, destroys anyone's appetite for breakfast.

"Not mine," he smiled, but he shut it down.

There was the usual hustling about for our baggage until we discovered it had been stored back in the rear end of the ship until we would get safely in the air.

Commander Rosendahl, Leeds and Lieut. Jack Richardson and Rickard turned into their berths and decided to catch some sleep. Like the others, they had remained up all night.

Rapidly the mists and fogs melted away from the earth and the sphere became clear in detail as a vast relief map. Medieval towns, with walls, towers, isolated castles and clusters of peasant dwellings with red-tiled roofs, stood out picturesquely against the green background. We began breakfast over the beautiful city of Nuremberg at 6:45. Capt. Lehmann, Lady Hay, Sir Hubert Wilkins and Col. Iselin and I sat together. A little later, Commodore Eckener came in from the bridge and ordered:

Short on Sleep

"One egg. Coffee."

He told me he had two and a half hours of sleep, but not any time for breakfast. He said:

"We are now up to 2,500 feet, but soon as we get over these hills of Middle Germany, we'll come down lower. I have shut down one motor and we are now running at 71 land miles an hour on four motors. I want as near as 1 can to 100 per cent reserve fuel for the time we shall reach Siberia."

The commodore chatted for a while with Gerville, of the Paris Matin, and then disappeared into the maze of the huge interior to the rear.

On two or three tables reposed Japanese flags, the red sun rising in a snow white field. Commander Fushiyoshi and the journalists, Entl and Kitano, made no attempt to hide the fact they are enjoying the sensation of travelling on the giant Graf.

Capt. Von Schiller came in to ask the passengers to be reasonably economical with the water. He said:

"You know, it's a long voyage to Tokio, and we don't want to run out."

Someone retorted:

"You don't mention wine?"

Von Schiller answered:

Recalls Nobile

"That's more limited than the water. There's plenty of drinking water, but don't let all the washwater run off carelessly."

At 8 o'clock, Capt. Lehmann took command of the bridge. Our first hours have been most auspicious and pleasant. May that be a promise for the entire flight.

Eckener and his men have not overlooked many "bets" in planning this excursion. There perhaps is no reason to recall the fate of the Nobile airship, "Italia," which was destroyed in the Polar ice regions, but at the same time the fact has been taken into account that over the barren steppes of Siberia most anything could happen.

So it was not surprising to learn, soon after we were well in the air, that Dr. Eckener had provided the airship with an arsenal in which were enough rifles and ammunition to protect the Zeppelin in case of a forced landing.

The military supplies are not carried for purposes of defense against any expected human enemies, but were solely intended as a protective measure against such beasts as Siberian wolves in case we should find it necessary to come down in that faraway land. The rifle might also, in that event, provide us with food when our supplies, which of course are only planned for a week or so, should give out.

Wilkins Marvels at View From Zeppelin

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Famous explorer, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 16.—(Radio via Norddeich).—At 6 minutes after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, we crossed out into the Baltic Sea.

The country over which we have been passing is most fascinating. The landscape, low and undulating, showed only a small percentage of good crops between Berlin and Stettin. The welcome for the Graf at Berlin was not wholly what was expected, only two airplanes coming up to greet us.

Stettin, over which we just passed is a striking town when viewed from the air. The streets radiate from a central circus in a geometrical design and the town just seems to spend itself naturally at the limits.

The wind has been varying from 12 to 20 miles an hour. We got under the cumulus clouds at 2,500 feet near the German-Polish frontier, where extensive forests mingle with the cultivated land.

Poland is sparsely populated and has very bad roads—at least that is the impression from the air. The general poverty, even, is noticeable. There is no machinery and every farm has its horsepower plant. Large groups of women are at work in the fields.

Danzig's welcome was stupendous. Airplanes greeted us and the factory sirens screeched us in and out of the city. Flags and handkerchiefs were flung to the breeze, and the curious shaped cathedral seemed to stretch out its towering spire as a token of regard.

Random Thoughts

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 16.—(Dropped at Berlin.)—This dispatch should really be headed "Thoughts and Sights while Zeppeling, with Apologies to O. O. McIntyre."

At 4:30 this morning, the Graf Zeppelin was warped rapidly across the landing field. Four minutes later we were rising beautifully from the hangar. It was warm, at 100 meters.

We are using five engines and burning gasoline for the first three hours. There's a light wind on the starboard quarter. The speed over the ground is about 65 land miles an hour. Gas bags are tightly filled and overflow as we rise.

We are over the hills quickly. We cross valleys filled with ground haze, then approach a thick fog obscuring the ground for 15 miles.

Then, the rising sun dispels the vapor, first revealing church spires, then houses, then the ground itself. At 6 o'clock, the temperature is lower and the angle of attack forward more normal. Speed is greater. The clearer atmosphere affords a fine vision of nature awakening.

Wandering Boars

Long shadows, like lace, spread on the ripening corn fields. Large owls, scarcely settled down to slumber, are rudely awakened, and flutter heavily from the trees. Two wild boars are wandering among the open timber.

In places, the birch trees edge the coniferous forests, their silver tinted leaves reaching from the ground to the top, lending them the appearance, from the air, of tall slim giant girls wearing lace pantaloons.

The cultivated fields, in various tones and shades, spread out like a multicolored carpet, upon which we ride slipping from pattern to pattern as we go. Three red deer race for cover. They passed a felled and stripped forest. The tree trunks, long poles, look like pins on a velvet cushion.

We are now over a wide cultivation of billions of cabbages, potential sauerkraut.

I notice a slight vibration and slight irregularity of sound. Apparently, one of the propellers is not absolutely true.

Two great bucks in a wide open space are racing and stopping, racing and stopping jerkily. We pass over a delightfully quaint old walled town. No one knows its name. More forests, less dense. Three sundry colored wild boars are rushing headlong stumbling into one another.

Now we are passing over Nuremberg. Caterpillar like trains are scurrying toward the town. Handkerchiefs flutter from the windows. Startled, two oxen drawing a wagon bolt headlong with the two men shouting. The wagon overturns in a gutter amidst wild confusion.

Flocks of great white geese waddle unhurriedly over dark green fields. Some flocks are shepherded by boys. Linen clothes are spread on the ground; other pieces flap in the wind. One of the motors has been voluntarily stopped. We reached Berlin in six hours.

CORONER FREES MAN OF BLAME

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 16.—George Marker, West Brownsville, former Washington County detective, was exonerated from blame in connection with the death of Samuel Yorty, alleged automobile thief, at an inquest in Beallsville yesterday by Coroner William B. Baker.

Mrs. Alice Hyatt, 36, Besco Negress, was also exonerated for the death of Judge Robinson, last Sunday, but a formal charge of murder had previously been preferred against her by Washington County authorities.

The jury found that the Yorty shooting was accidental. Yorty was fatally wounded when he and three companions were caught stealing tires from Marker's automobile last Sunday.

The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern

A PLEASING SUMMER FROCK.

Printed voile, or organdy in the new soft shades would be nice for this pretty model. The fronts are lapped above the jabot. A youthful collar outlines a V neck edge. The waist blouses above a full skirt. The sleeve is short and is trimmed with a facing, which may be omitted. This style is also suggested for organdy or taffeta with collar and jabot of lace.

The pattern is cut in five sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make the dress for a 38-inch size will require 3⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide or wider. For collar, jabot, sleeve facings and belt of contrasting material ⅝ yard 36 inches wide is required cut crosswise. To finish with binding as illustrated in the large view will require 3½ yards 1½-inch wide. The width of the dress at the lower edge with fulness extended is two yards.

THAWS SAILING FOR EUROPE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—With a new record to its credit on the last westbound crossing, the Cunarder Mauretania left for Europe early this morning with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw, Thomas Mellon and Henry Carnegie Phipps, social registerites of Pittsburgh, in the passenger list. The travelers in this flyer sailed with interest keyed as they expected the Mauretania to try for a new eastbound record on the run to Plymouth, Havre and Southampton. Mr. and Mrs. Thaw will spend the month of September abroad.

Sailing with a list of notables as fellow passengers, Dr. H. G. Schleiter, noted Pittsburgh surgeon, left this morning in the steamship France to spend the balance of the summer in Europe.

River Tonnage Sets Day Record

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 16.—A record period in river traffic was recorded Tuesday when 19 steamboats, 38 loaded barges and 38 empty barges passed the Martins Ferry-Warwood dam within 18 hours, District Overseer J. E. Carpenter reported. This is believed the heaviest volume of traffic in a like period in the history of the Wheeling district.

Four of the empty barges were downbound from Pittsburgh to the Inland Waterways Commission at St. Louis. They were built at Pittsburgh.

Ryan's Arrest Saves Wife Customs Fine

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. — AP.) — Customs officials revealed that they had refrained from imposing any penalty upon Mrs. Thomas Fortune Ryan, II, for making an incorrect declaration because they took into account her mental agitation over the arrest in France of her husband for issuing worthless checks. Ryan, to whom she recently had been married, was prevented from sailing with her by his arrest.

Real Estate

Activity in the purchase of homes in the suburban district in the midsummer season is shown by the increasing number of transfers recorded during the last week. In the South Hills and in the Monongahela valley region scores of homes have changed hands. Several of these were private sales.

In Bradford Woods borough Alvin Watson sold a plot 90 by 340 feet on the Wexford Run road to Irwin Salm for considgration of $2,500.

E. B. Hulley, builder, sold to James W. Harper a seven-room brick dwelling at 5121 Bayard street Seventh ward, on a lot 48 by 85 feet. The purchaser will occupy the property as a home.

Francis P. Anton has purchased a duplex dwelling with three garages at 6328-30 Forward avenue, Fourteenth ward, from M. A. McCoy. The lot is 30 by 130 feet.

William Spirnak will erect a brick dwelling at 1231 Ingham street Twenty-seventh ward, at an estimated cost of $6,000.

C. L. Saxton Company reports the sale of the business known as the Elizabeth Dining Room, 2115 Carson street, to Edith L. Woodhall for $1,600. A lease hold was made for Sarah F. Reilly and Nettie H. Minton.

Louis Larimore has sold a property, lot 25 by 100 feet, in Zara street, Thirtieth ward, to Adolph T. Daley for consideration of $8,600.

Eugene H. Eckert has sold a dwelling on a lot 80 by 100 feet in Main street, Sharpsburg, to Walter W. Howell for consideration of $7,250.

Ridgway Burgess Has No Opposition

RIDGWAY, Pa., Aug. 16.—C. L. Park, who has been burgess for the past four years will again be a candidate. He has filed on both the Republican and Democratic tickets, and has no opposition.

"Better eggs, finer oil give this flavor"
SAY SUCCESSFUL COOKS

"—any real cook can tell it contains the very best eggs and oil"

"It's a delight to have Hellmann's in the refrigerator. I've used it for 2 years and it's always so marvelously good for every kind of a salad. Any real cook can tell, just by the taste, it contains the very best eggs and oil."—Catherine Locke

The charming luncheons of Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, Jr., of Boston, are prepared by Catherine Locke.

"—I don't know of anything more appetizing"

"No lunch is ever served in this house without a salad. And with a real mayonnaise, like Hellmann's, I don't know of anything more appetizing. You can always tell Hellmann's by its true, bland mayonnaise flavor. I've used it for six years."—Nina Swanson.

Nina Swanson's cooking is justly valued by the famous Ethel Barrymore.

GOOD COOKS need the best of everything to work with! They know fine food means, first of all, ingredients of the very highest quality.

That is why Hellmann's Mayonnaise is preferred in 5,000,000 homes today. Its rich, true flavor comes from the choicest eggs, the purest salad oil, the clearest vinegar, and rare spices.

These ingredients—and nothing else—are carefully blended, after a jealously guarded French recipe, in six sunny kitchens, scattered across the country. Wherever you live, there is a Hellmann kitchen not far off, from which the jars of fresh mayonnaise are brought swiftly and regularly to your grocer.

Order a jar of Hellmann's Mayonnaise today. Keep a jar always on hand for your salads and sandwiches. The popular family size is ½ pint—25¢. Other sizes, 3½ ounce, pint, and quart jars.

Bayer-Tablets of Aspirin — Genuine

The Mark of Genuine Aspirin..

BAYER ASPIRIN is like an old friend, tried and true. There can never be a satisfactory substitute for either one. Bayer Aspirin is genuine. It is the accepted antidote for pain. Its relief may always be relied on, whether used for the occasional headache, to head-off a cold, or for the more serious aches and pains from neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or other ailments. It's easy to identify Bayer Aspirin by the Bayer Cross on every tablet, by the name Bayer on the box and the word "genuine" always printed in red.

BAYER

Ovations Stir Lady Hay

mander Fujiyoshi is clad in his dark uniform and busies himself tremendously in corners with maps and charts.

It is a warm morning, even as early as we flew away. We are very low now, at 1,200 feet, and it is positively cold even as high as 2,550 feet.

Young Ernst, the cabin boy, is so eager to see Berlin, over which we are to pass at about 10:30, that he is running about with field glasses almost as big as himself, mistaking every town for his Vaterland's capital.

Even Capt. Lehman and Capt. Schiller were telling me over the breakfast table that it hardly seems real we are speeding toward Japan. The passengers, too, are continually saying:

"It seems like a dream; indeed, it is—a dream of men's ambition to conquer the elements, to conquer space, to conquer nature's barriers, which, since the world began, have effectively segregated the races and the peoples of the nation."

Adventurers in Air

Mountains, rivers, arid deserts and ice fields have directed or stemmed the tide of history since the days of Adam and Eve. Without presumption, but in gratitude for the power of scientific and mechanical achievement, our little band of 60 souls is adventuring in full faith and confidence on this pioneer expedition, fully realizing that success will not be man's alone, but God's mercy to those who have travailed in humility to reap the secrets of the elements and follow the ungentle path of self-sacrifice and disillusionment in the trail of that inexorably exacting taskmistress—knowledge.

The all-night festivities and dancing and early departure from the hotel were jammed with superficial excitement or genuine emotion. The farewells in the airship hall gave way to nothing less than awe as the passengers, in silence, watched mother earth recede beneath their gaze, with mighty motors throbbing and straining and pulling gallantly under their heavy morning-hour load.

Less than five minutes after scheduled time, the giant airship was released to the air. Almost nonchalantly it heaved its proud silver beauty to the first pale rays of the pastel dawn, sunning the gleaming breast with almost birdlike coquetry.

FALL FROCKS

This is a most interesting event—in that nothing but new fall dresses are shown. We are introducing the modes which several noted manufacturers have created for the new season—and, to popularize them quickly, the manufacturers made a price-concession which we share with you. Otherwise, we, nor any other store, could not sell them for Fifteen Dollars.

You will notice the lengthened hem-line is favored for fall. You will see that the cape effect is very popular. Fabrics are: Beautiful, sheer Satins; the new Roma Crepe, the ever fashionable Flat Crepe and Velvet-trimmed Crepes. Though Brown will be fashionable, we show the other fall tones in blues, tans and black. Sizes for women, misses, juniors and larger women.

Negro Accused Of Mail Robbery

ROMNEY, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Police arrested John Taylor, a Negro, driving a car with a North Carolina license, charged with having held up Mrs. John Whitacre, who was substituting for her father, U. J. Pugh, as a rural carrier on the road from Gore to Trone, Va.

He is alleged to have opened the mail sack and found three letters. He was turned over to Virginia authorities.

Child on Coaster Killed by Auto

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 16.—Charles Matsko, 6, of Donora, died in the Monongahela Hospital from injuries received when struck in McKean avenue by an automobile, police said, driven by Harry Gowdell, of Donora. The lad cut across the street on a coaster in front of the car. His skull was fractured. No charges have been made against Gowdell.

LONG DISTANCE PHONE CALLS FOLLOW DOLORES DEL RIO ACROSS COUNTRY

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

(Copyright 1929, by Premier Syndicate).

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.

What this flick bureau craves to know is: Who's the man in Baltimore who telephones Dolores Del Rio regardless what town she may be personal appearance-ing in? He does. And he plays both violin and saxophone. Frequently, he is reported as giving Dolores a telephone concert that lasts 60 minutes or so. Is this love—or has a rose been monikered another name. .

Dolores Del Rio

When Miss Del Rio arrived in Minneapolis on her "Evangeline" tour, Capt. W. H. Fawcett, millionaire publisher, and his wife chucked a lavish week-end party in her honor, to celebrate her twenty-third birthday, at their gorgeous estate, Breezy Point Lodge, 150 miles from Minneapolis. Some 90 friends of the Fawcetts were present, including their prize motion picture magazine writer, Ruth Beery; Claire Windsor, Harry Curtis, son of the country's vice president; John Raskob and others. Verily, a good time was had by all.

Ruth Chatterton

to an English company and so, perforce, had to refuse the offer.

SCREENALITIES: What's this, one hears, about Douglas Fairbanks' first wife purchasing a home just below Pickfair? . . Daphne Pollard, A. K. comedian, is plenty busy comiking these days. She just completed her role in "Big Time," featuring Lee Tracy, and begins "Loose Ankles" the end of this week. "L. A." one might add, is not the romance of a contortionist . . Ralph Forbes and Ruth Chatterton have moved in from Malibou to their Bev Hills home. Said home has been in the process of renovation for the past five months. Um, evoluting from Spanish to English. Incidentally, ye sleuth hound spotted Ralph on Corinne Griffith's "Lilies of the Field" set t'other day. Two and two equal four. Ralph will be Corinne's hero in this flick. If I'm wrong, send over your lawyers . . . T'other day, Raoul Walsh's father spotted two whales off Malibou's amazing beach. Whales are like teachers. They follow a school of fish.

Wife Opposes Windsor Films

BEFORE leaving Capt. Fawcett's party, I gotta paragraph what happened to Claire Windsor. The guests motored to the Breezy Point Lodge. They stopped for a minute in Little Falls, Ind., which, it seems, is the town where Lindbergh first saw the light. The entire population of L. F.—a few hundred—turned out to view the celebs. suddenly, a bulky woman shoved aside those in front of her, pushing a timid little man ahead of her. She waved a mighty fist at the startled Claire Windsor and shouted:

Claire Windsor

"There she is. Take a good look at her."

The poor man squirmed uncomfortably.

"Yeah, you!" yelled the woman at Claire. "Ain't I been tryin' to keep him from seein' your pitshurs for 10 years? Look at her," she shook her poor provider. "That orta get 'er outta your head!"

THEIR REAL NAME DEPARTMENT: Irving Berlin — Isadore Baline.

She recently arrived in ye colony from merrie England. She, being Juliette Compton. Tall. Slender. Black hair bobbed Scotch style. Grey eyes that mist 'neath black lashes. Transplanted from London where she is a w. k. actress both on stage and screen, Juliette is a little prone to uncertainty of Hollywood's customs, habits and inuendoes of speech. But she's a good trouper, with poise, charm and sincerity her allies. At the present penning, Miss Compton is traipsing with Betty Compson in Tiffany Stahl's reeler, "Woman to Woman."

Had Vamp Role In Gish Picture

IT WAS several years ago that Juliette played the vamp in Dorothy Gish's British production, "Nell Gwyn." As a result of her performance, Famous Players wanted her for a Menjou picture, but Miss Compson was under contract

WALTER WINCHELL — On Broadway

Aftermath NEW YORK, Aug. 16.

. . . for all the vows and promises we made
Have dwindled into nothingness, and laid
Themselves in rotting dust about our feet. . . .
No more the furtive glance, the throb and beat
Of hearts which once in harmony had spun
Their golden words and speech . . . now they run
And hasten to the recesses of my heart
To dwell, in time to bring the pain and smart,
The ragged remnants of distorted love. . . .
In agony I raise my eyes above,
Where topmost stars dance in cerulean blue. . . .
And wonder how the gods have dealt with you,
—Alan Frederick Pater.

JUKK

THEN there's the one about Gregory Warburton Moskowitz, who had never left the Ghetto, who was urged by his pal, Wellington Cromwell Lipskin, to take a stroll with him on Fifth Avenue. "Who cares about Fift' Havenue?" argued Moskowitz, "by me de East Side is good enuf!"

"But to take a stroll alung Fift' Havenue," persisted Lipskin, "is haducational. Com, take a wukk wit' me hop tonn!' Mosky finally gave in.

As they neared the 50's, Lipskin pointed out the various high spots and remarked: "Dere dare is de Wanderbilt mension and plizz dun't be a sussalist and show respact. For heaven's sake stop scratching youself on Fift' Havenue!"

"Say!" argued Moskowitz, "if it bites me on Fift' Avenue, should I scretch myself on Rivington Stritt?"

OF ALL THINGS!

A pair of heeb operation-talkers were trying to out-talk each other on their respective ailments. "Say!" interrupted one of them, "mine ductor is de bast in de tonn! And chipp alzo!"

"Is diss so?" countered the other. "Mine is sotch a great ductor, dat yesterday during an operation he had to fire three of his nurses—becuz dey applauded him!"

THE NEW VERSION

MACK STEELE, just returned from the West Coast, would have you believe he missed a train connection in a small desert town and had to frequent the hamlet's only hotel, at which the rates were fifty cents and one dollar.

"What's the difference?" asked Steele.

"The dollar rooms have fly guns."

SOTTO VOCE

Dolly Gilbert: It appears that the dispatch from Hollywood was garbled. A Mr. Perry was killed and not Joe Vanuti, who is in a critical condition, however.
Ben Warren: It just misses.
Dorothy Stickney: Have a letter for you.

THE REVENGE SWEET

IN the Astor Hunting Room where the film executives gather every noon they are swapping the fact about the vindictive magnate who evened matters with a youngster who disconcerted him. At a luncheon two years ago the boss was summoned out of the room, and as he turned to beg their pardon for leaving, he saw one of his staff thumb his nose at him.

The next day the lad was promoted at a sweet increase in wage. A month later he was handed another handsome salary tilt and a more important post. The chap decided it was time to get married, and then bought his wife an expensive motor car and an elegant home.

After the fellow was living in style and enjoying life the boss personally fired him. "I saw you thumb your nose at me, you ingrate!" yelled the magnate, "but you were too insignificant to fire at the time. Now, you rat, get out of here and find out how wonderful it was to have HAD a good job!"

THE BROADWAY CREDO

(With a nod to G. J. Nathan.)

That Ziegfeld and Percy Hammond always wear blue shirts. . . . That it is necessary to have a screen test to get into the movies. . . . That dramatic editors always carry passes just to be relieved of them. . . . That advertising solicitors are newspapermen. . . . That ticket speculators only charge the 50-cent premium which is a state law. . . . That it is cheaper to dine at Child's. . . . That chorus men are human beings, and that two and two make four in a night club.

OH, MR. ZIEGFELD!

SO far as this ankle-admirer is concerned the Goddess of Beauty, Purity and Loveliness in the past few years has been the contagious-looker who reclines on the moon in the Blue Moon Hosiery advertisement. You've probably gone limp ogling her likeness in the trolleys, subways or "L" trams.

No "Follies" nor a "Hollywood Revue" can be complete without her. So, perhaps it will amaze you, as it did us, to discover that the lass who posed for the ad is in the ensemble of a burlesque show which is at present in Utica, but which is due at the Columbia, here, next Monday.

We'll see you there.

NITTIES

And Elbert Severance argues that the blue ribbon for the best flip crack of the month should be hurled at the Savannah (Ga.) News' clown, for: "Some girls use dumb-bells to get color on their faces and some use color on their faces to get dumb-bells."

But our choice is Telephone Topic's: "The human brain is a marvelous organ. It starts to function as soon as we get up and doesn't stop until we get to the office."

NOT NEW, BUT SWELL

THE ace of the Fred Allen observations, which cannot be published too frequently, followed the star clown's annoyance over a contemporary who was thefting his stuff. "Surely you're not goin' to let him get away with stealing your best cracks, all the time, are you?" argued a pal.

"Oh, what's the use?" asserted Allen. "After all, he isn't to blame. I understand that shortly after he was born, his mother accidentally laid him on a piece of carbon paper."

HAW!

Take it from John P. Medbury, what the world really needs is a genius who can invent a phonograph that will play "Sonny Boy" three times—and then explode!

Dethol

It shows them no mercy

WHY play hide and seek or give in to flies and mosquitoes? You don't have to tolerate these annoying pests another single day. Spray Dethol. Get rid of them.

Dethol never fails. Flies and mosquitoes breathe it—and die. By the roomful. And it's so easy. The Dethol mist from the handy sprayer does it. Just as deadly to roaches, ants, bedbugs, moths, fleas. For cleaning, spray basins, bathtubs, tiling. Leaves a spotless, glistening surface when wiped. And you'll like the clean, refreshing odor of Dethol.

Nothing is so quick, so sure as Dethol. If you don't think so too, if you're the least bit dissatisfied with Dethol, return it to the store and get your money back. Dethol Mfg. Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Debutante To Return Home

THE latter part of next week will see a few more Pittsburgh folks back in town, and the week after will bring still more. Early September will see them hurrying home to be in readiness for autumnal social events.

Among those returning next week will be Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan, of Pittsburgh and Sewickley, and their daughter Peggy, who'll make her debut this fall. The Milligans' who've been at Ahmic Lake, Canada, the guest of friends, are expected home on Thursday, I understand.

Mrs. George Paull, of Stanton avenue, and her daughter, Nancy Lea Paull, have been at the Ross Mountain Club, New France, Pa. Mr. Paull will rejoin his family today for the week-end.

Nancy's engagement to Robert Baldwin Nation, son of the William H. Nations, of Muncie, Ind., was announced last month.

DOWN at White Sulphur Springs summer weather is no deterrent to entertaining. The George W. Crawfords, of Pittsburgh, who have been there for the summer, on Tuesday evening gave a dinner dance at the Kate's Mountain Club for 75 guests, news has reached us.

Other well-known Pittsburghers prominent in the social life of the resort are the Walter G. Mortlands, who spend much of their time in recent years in New York. They entertained on Tuesday with a luncheon on the Casino terrace.

At a buffet supper given recently by Mrs. A. M. Reed at the Casino the guests included Mrs. Mortland and Mrs. Crawford's mother, Mrs. R. N. Warmack.

MRS. JAMES B. LAUGHLIN and her daughter, Miss Alice D. Laughlin, have returned from Europe, did you know? Instead of coming to Pittsburgh immediately, they have gone to their summer home, Fieldstone, at Hyannisport, Mass., for the remainder of the summer.

UP at Watch Hill entertaining is reaching a climax. Mr. and Mrs. A. Rex Flinn will entertain with a luncheon Sunday at the Misquamicut Golf Club for their house guests, the John Lawrences and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Heinz.

Tennis tournaments are popular at Watch Hill. William S. Moorhead, Thomas M. Jones III, W. B. Trainer, Jr., and J. Frederick Byers are entered in the men's championship tournament at the Misquamicut Golf Club.

At Eaglesmere, a resort quite a little nearer home, Mrs. Thomas J. Hilliard, of Aylesboro avenue, will take part in the annual golf tournament for women, which will open next week.

After being the guest of Juliet Hillman, daughter of the J. Hartwell Hillmans, at their summer home in Beaumaris, Canada, Margaret McCready, daughter of the Robert T. M. McCreadys, of Meadow Gardens, Edgeworth, has gone to Cherry Valley, N. Y. And there she is being entertained by Mary Mellon McClung, daughter of the Samuel Alfred McClungs, at their summer home.

House parties at summer homes are popular indeed these days. Just now the Robert L. Clauses have among their guests the Harris Rudisill Potters, and the Brook L. Jarretts, all of Sewickley, at their Muskoka Lake home.

LISTED among the Pittsburgh people spending some time in Atlantic City are Mrs. Jay G. Stephens, Mrs. Harper Smith, Mrs. C. W. Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. M. Mackenzie and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Smith, who are at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart, Miss Mary Jane Stewart, Miss Ruth Ryan, Miss Mildred Ryan and Miss Viola Metcalf, at the Seaside Hotel.

MISS ANNABELLE BURDICK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Burdick, of Heberton avenue, whose marriage to Alfred McKinley Terhune, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Terhune, of Newark, N. J., will be solemnized Wednesday, August 21, has asked her sister, Mrs. Ruth Armour Irwin, of Kansas City, Mo., to be her matron of honor, and her niece, Corinne May Irwin, will be flower girl. Frank R. Terhune is to be his brother's best man and the ushers will include Frederick Burdick, brother of the bride, and Hazen Armstrong, of Saginaw, Mich. The ceremony will be performed in the Burdick home by the Rev. J. Willard Acheson, and will be followed by a reception.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE E. RICHARDS, of Hawthorne avenue, Crafton, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ann Ruth Richards, to John G. Boyle, son of J. J. Boyle, of Crafton. An early fall wedding is planned.

* * *

MISS GRACE MESSER will be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Grace M. Noden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Noden, of Morningside avenue, and Roscoe Elton Hanna, Jr., of Wilkinsburg, which will take place September 25 in Emory Methodist Episcopal Church. The bridesmaids will be Miss Frances Hanna and Miss Ruth Mallinson and the flower girls will be Grace Westwood and Catherine Emily Cutts. Miss Martha Patti, of New York and Pittsburgh, will sing and Miss Jean Fogo, of Wellsville, O., will play the wedding music. Marlin Karper, of Harrisburg, will be best man and the ushers will include George J. Noden, Boyd E. Hanna, James B. Hunter, all of this city; and Hubert Lynch, of Ashboro, N. C., and Pittsburgh.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the marriage of Miss Nora L. Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Henderson, of North Highland avenue, and Clyde [illegible] Osborne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Osborne, of Narrow Weald, England, which was solemnized August 7 in the Henderson home by the Rev. Dr. Robert W. Woods, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.

THE marriage of Miss Bertha Lawson, of Columbus, O., and Einar Thoresen, of Portland street, will be solemnized tomorrow in the Holy Rosary Church, Columbus, by the Rev. John J. Murphy. A reception in the home of the bride's aunt, Miss Amy Nash, will follow the ceremony and later, Mr. and Mrs. Thoresen will leave for a motor trip to the East and Canado. They will make their home in Woodbourne avenue, Brookline.

Striped Costumes for Sport Wear, Paris Style Masters Decree

Pleated Skirts Featured in New Model.

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Aug. 16. — Stripes are stars in the firmament of fashion just now, especially in that department of the mode that concerns itself with sports wear.

With us here "sport" is a comprehensive word that seems to embrace all our activities from breakfast and only stopping at afternoon tea. Certainly some of the delightful things created for sports wear would seem somewhat out of place on the tennis court or golf links, but could with perfect ease stroll into the Ritz for luncheon—and they do!

But the hats, shoes and accessories worn with these sports outfits are always in keeping with the original purposes of the dress. Elaborate trifles do not transform a sports frock into an afternoon costume; they merely spoil it.

WE think you will like the chic outfit glimpsed recently at the polo games.

It is a sleeveless one-piece dress, worn beneath a cardigan jacket with a scarf collor. The frock is belted with black antelope, and subscribes to the prevailing silhouette by a pleated flounce placed low on the skirt.

Both dress and jacket are of light grey crepe de chine, striped in black. The hat is of black felt, the purse and shoes of black antelope.

PATOU can always be depended upon to keep the ball of fashion rolling, and certainly he has given us several new touches in this, one of his latest designs.

He has lifted the waist line and reintroduced us to our old friend the pleated-all-around skirt. Both shirtwaist and skirt are of yellow wash silk, and the coat is of brown wool poplin with deep tucks and rows of wide hemstitching.

The coat is unlined and so allows glimpses of the frock through the hemstitching.

Below appears another Patou creation. Note the lifted waistline and skirt pleated all around.

Retail Stores Group Meets Here Sept. 9

National officers and members of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce are making plans for the annual meeting of the Industrial Retail Stores Association which convenes in Pittsburgh September 9. Managers and executives of industrial retail stores from all sections of the country will attend the convention.

OPEN SIXTIETH STORE HERE

Harking back to their first business venture, five years ago, Henry and Arthur Traubman today are opening their sixtieth store in their chain, in Pittsburgh.

Harry Taubman

It was five years ago last July that two young Pittsburghers walked into the office of the Baltimore Sun and announced they were looking for a location for their automobile accessory store. Within a few minutes they had their location and then began the business of having a grand opening. It was a success. The store grew and prospered.

Four months after the Baltimore store was opened, the two brothers opened another in Washington, D. C., their first branch. It was built upon the slogan of economical prices and courteous consideration for every customer. The success of their second venture induced them to look for more fields. They canvassed the country and found their business methods were solid. Within a short time more stores were opened, in Norfolk, Buffalo, Newark and by the end of 1925 Traubmans were operating 25 stores in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Virginia and New England.

Arthur Taubman

Now Pittsburgh, which they claim as their home city, gets their sixtieth store. Both were residents of the city for 15 years. Henry is president and Arthur vice president.

Hoover to Join Son And Wife in Camp

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—President Hoover planned still another week-end escape today from the humidity of a Washington August, for an over-Sunday stay at his fishing camp on the Rapidan River. The President expects to go to his Madison (Va.), camp site, to take part in a big celebration on the fair grounds.

Mrs. Hoover and her son Allen already are at camp, where they have been staying for the past two weeks while Allan convalesced from a stomach ailment.

Coxey Will Speak At Harvest Home

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 16.—Jacob S. Coxey, of Massillon, O., of Coxey's Army fame, will be the main speaker at the Jackson Center Harvest Home celebration to be held at Jackson Center Park, near Mercer, Saturday.

Jack Fails to Rescue Anita And She Is Killed in Fall From Mountain

CHAPTER XLVIII.

"OH, I'm so afraid—so afraid!"

She sobbed uncontrollable, clinging to him, as a drowning woman clings to a rescuer, with clutching, tearing hands.

"Shut up, will you? Anita, stop clawing my neck! You're all right! Good God, you're safe. It was I the tree almost fell on, not you—shut up, I say!"

"But I'm so afraid—Jack, take me home, Oh, I want to go home—"

She wouldn't stop that incessant moaning. It kept him from thinking, and he must decide something, and quickly. The storm gave no promise of abating. The rain came down in torrents, and the din of the thunder was deafening. There was something unreal and overdone about it. Like a storm scene in a cheap, melodramatic play.

But there was nothing unreal about the rain. It fell in icy sheets, chilling them to the bone. Impossible that an hour ago they had been warm. Jack shook himself irritably. He was cold and stiff and unnerved. They were at least seven miles from the lodge and the horses were tired and stubborn. It would take hours to get back over the slippery rock and the sunken narrow trails that had turned into rivers, carrying the water in a rushing, bubbly brown torrent down hill. He stared at the weeping woman disgustedly. "Well, get back on the horse!" he said brutally, "unless you want to be left behind."

"I can't—I can't—"

"Then walk—I'm going to ride!"

"Oh, help me—help me—I'm so sick—so afraid—" She turned her streaked, ravaged face full upon him, and held out beseeching, skinny arms. With her wet, stringing hair and her loose, sagging mouth she looked like one demented. He shrank from her. "Keep your hands off me, will you!"

Her quick, heartbroken wail told him that he had taken the wrong tack. The patient work of weeks was lost. They were right back where they were six months ago, she suspicious, he desperate. . . and no way out . . .

"Oh, why do you hate me? What have I ever done," she moaned, rocking back and forth in her misery, forgetting everything but his revulsion, impervious at last to the rain and the cold.

That couldn't go on. He looked around dejectedly, with the half-formed idea of finding some cave, some shelter from the unceasing rain. And he thought he saw, high on the mountain above, a brown cabin, half hidden by the brush.

He put his cold hands in his pockets, and stared, trying to penetrate the distance. He thought he saw a gray thread winding up to it . . . a trail through the brush and stone.

With something like hope he ran to the bushes a few yards up the trail, and crashed through them, fighting his way up the steep bank to a more level place above. There was no doubt about it; it was a trail.

"There's a cabin above," he told her when he came back. "We'll make for that. The horses will go back to the lodge, and they'll send out a searching party presently. We're in luck."

She remained motionless, leaning against the bank. Her face was turned to the mud wall.

He suppressed an almost overwhelming desire to shake her. "Are you coming, or aren't you?"

"I can't—I can't!"

"Then stay here, damn it!"

He did not really intend to leave her. He would have come back for her. But when she lifted her head and saw him disappearing into the brush above she gave a long, gurgling cry of pure terror and stumbled after him, threshing wildly through the brush, stumbling, panting, crying "Wait—don't leave me—wait!"

She caught up to him where he was resting on a boulder trying to get his breath. She had torn her face in the brush. A little thread of blood trickled down her chin. "Wait—wait!" she panted, and she clutched at his leg, breathing in loud, rasping gasps.

He gave her a hand and then toiled on, breaking the brush aside for her, struggling against the urge to run on ahead, to put this panting, repulsive woman out of his sight.

She followed, whimpering under her breath. When the brambles scratched her, or the stones hurt her feet she sobbed aloud. But she kept close at his heels, sometimes on all fours, sometimes lurching drunkenly around perilous turns, careless of her footing. Once she staggered and caught herself just in time.

He thought, "If she fell it wouldn't be my fault!" They had come to a bad place. Evidently the trail had been unused since the winter. Rain or snow had washed it almost away, leaving scanty footing on the sheer, barren face of the cliff. Hundreds of feet below, the river boiled down the floor of the narrow, wedge-shaped canyon. Above them the rock overhung, forcing them to the edge of the perilous path. For a moment he hesitated. It seemed useless to try it. But they had come so far, gone over so many bad places. He could see the cabin plainly now. It meant warmth, dry clothes, steaming coffee.

He crept out to the narrow point, cursing himself for his nervous fears. It was not like him to be dizzy. Showed what a woman like Anita could do to a man. . .suppose he should fall, and she make it safely to the cabin! She'd never die. . .Strong as an ox this minute for all her puffing and wailing . . .fool that he was to ever think . . .

What was that? The gravel was slipping under his feet! . . .He shut his eyes . . .mustn't get dizzy . . . steady there . . .

After an age of breathless waiting the miniature landslide ceased. He was still there. The rain had stopped, too, and the sun was breaking through the clouds. Another step or two and he'd be past the danger. He waited a moment, gathering his nerve . . .it was bad business, bad business. . .

"Jack—wait—"

"Stay there—wait till I see—"

"Jack—help me—I—" She wouldn't wait. She was right after him, puffing, sniffing, slipping, grabbing at him . . she'd pull him with her . . . "Let go!" he screamed . . . God, she almost did it . . . they'd both fall . . . "Let go, I tell you . . .Let go!" But she wouldn't let go, so he pushed . . . pushed . . .

Anita was falling. Rolling over and over, slowly, like something in a slow moving picture. He watched her, blinking. She turned over and over, and then she lay all still, on a great, jutting boulder.

Jack pulled a large silk handkerchief out of his pocket and mopped his face. He sat down and watched the motionless heap that was Anita. She never even screamed. Sweat broke out all over him. She was dead. He had shoved her over. "God, I killed her . . .I finally killed her . . . Anita, my wife . . . I killed her!"

Did he say that out loud? He jumped up in a panic. Must be careful . . . must do something . . . get down to where she was . . . call somebody . . . pretend . . .

But he couldn't think. He couldn't remember how he got past the bad place, or where he was going. All he could remember was the look on her face as she reached for him, and the feel of her hand to . . . to save himself . . .

He sat there watching. His wet clothes steamed in the sun.

Ann Marie Resists John When He Attempts to Embrace Her

show pinkish-yellow in the windows of the houses. The arc light at the corner flashed up.

The headlights of a car that swung into the street were like the eyes of some giant-size animal in the darkness. . . Ann Marie put her head to one side and listened. She knew the low purring sound of that car. . .It was John Lawler's new roadster!

"He's coming here—and, ye gods! how I look!" In a flash Ann Marie was on the other side of the room, peering into the looking glass above the muslin-draped table.

"My nose shining like a brass doorknob, of course!" she groaned aloud, "And my hair all screwed back behind my ears!"

With one hand she fluffed a powder puff across her nose, and with the other she pulled out the one big bone hair pin in her hair, loosening it in a shower around her shoulders.

It was wonderful hair—thick and naturally curly. It was light-brown and the curled-up ends of it looked as if they had been dipped in a pot of pure gold.

Ann Marie had just time enough to twist it up in a soft roll at the back of her head and to put on a pair of high-heeled slippers when the front doorbell rang.

She ran down the stairs, slipping out of the smock that covered her blue crepe house-dress as she ran. There was an old-fashioned hall seat at the bottom of the stairs and she flung the smock into it as she passed it.

"Quite the young lady of leisure!" she giggled to herself as she opened the door to the man who stood outside on the porch.

"Hello, John!" she said to him, "How nice to see you! —And if you'd come two minutes later you'd have missed me! I was just going down town to take some cards to my father."

John Lawler came into the hall. "Glad I didn't miss you," he said shortly and awkwardly, "put your things on. . .I'll take you down to your dad's store. Glad to."

John Lawler was the "catch" of the little suburban town. He was 23, just starting work in his father's bank, and very good-looking in a blond lanky sort of way.

A good-looking man can attract almost any girl that he wants to attract.

A man with plenty of money can attract nine girls out of ten.

Young John Lawler, with both money and good looks, knew deep down in his bachelor heart that he could have his pick of the girls in town—with one exception.

That one exception was Ann Marie Macy.

He never had been able to get far with her, and he did not know why. He had been coming here to the old brown shingle house to call on her once or twice a week for the past year.

But so far he had never been able to get up enough courage to even try to kiss her, although he wanted to every time he laid eyes on her.

So far he had not even dared to slip his arm along the back of the seat of his car when she went driving with him, although he had made love to every other girl who ever had gone for a drive in it with him.

And when he was with her he was always awkward and nervous and ill at ease.

He shifted from one foot to the other now as he stood looking down at her, and he fidgeted with the gray felt hat that he was holding in his hands.

Ann Marie smiled up at him—a lovely smile that crinkled up the corners of her dark blue eyes and made deep dimples in her cheeks. Ann Marie was prettier than most girls, but when she smiled she was a dream!

"I'll run upstairs and get the cards, Johnny," she said. Her voice was sweet and soft and a little bit husky. "I won't be two minutes. There's a fire in the grate in the sitting room. Go in and warm yourself. This hall's always as cold as a tomb."

She gave him a little shove towards the door of the sitting room and ran up the stairs.

When she came running down once more, in a little close-fitting hat and blue cape, he was still standing where she had left him under the hall lamp with its ruby-red shade. He was still fidgeting with his hat.

"Party tomorrow night at the Country Club, Ann Marie," he said, grinning at her. His gray eyes were very friendly and eager. "Go with me?"

"Crazy about it," answered Ann Marie promptly. She loved a party. All of it—from the moment she began to dress for it in her only evening gown and her silver slippers to the moment when she came quietly into the house at midnight on tired and aching feet. "Only I haven't a single thing to wear but that old yellow dress of mine. Care?"

He held the door open for her. "Of course I don't care what you wear, Ann Marie. Anything you wear is—all right."

What he was thinking and what he wanted to say was that she was a raving beauty no matter what she wore . . . But he couldn't say it to her any more than he could take her into his arms when he wanted to.

He stood, flushed and silent and awkward, while she passed him and stepped out upon the porch.

A thin cold rain had begun to fall and the glow of the headlights on John's roadster was reflected in the wet gleaming pavement.

"I love rain coming down and lights shining in the dark!" Ann Marie declared, hopping into the car. "Some time I'm going to paint a real picture—and it's going to be roofs all covered with rain, and a dark gray sky. Twilight, you know. . .Don't you love rain, John?"

"Sure I love it." He tucked the fur robe around Ann Marie's knees. "Sure—I'm crazy about anything that you're crazy about."

That was as near as he had ever come to telling her that he was in love with her. He laughed nervously after he had said it.

"How are you going to find time to paint pictures, Ann Marie?" he said a few seconds later when they were turning into Front street. "You know what I mean?—You'll get married like all girls and you won't have any time for painting pictures, will you? I know my mother is always saying she can't find time to do half the things she wants to do—if a woman keeps house and has children and goes out with her husband sometimes in the evening—"

He stopped talking suddenly as if his brain had stopped working at that point. And Ann Marie was too surprised to ask him to go on with what he had started to say.

For he never had talked to her in this way before. He never had said much of anything serious or important to her before. All of his talk had been about football games he had seen during his four years at college or about some new dance music that he had heard lately or about a travel book that he had been reading.

Neither of them spoke until the roadster slowed down and stopped at the curb outside Mr. Macy's book store on Front street near Garden Court.

Then Ann Marie answered one of the questions he had just asked her.

"I don't intend to get married, Johnny," she said slowly. He was helping her out of the car, and she stood on the step a few inches above the sidewalk. Her eyes were on a level with his eyes. "I'm going to study painting until I know just about everything there is to know about it—and then I'm going to paint pictures, myself. You watch me!"

"Oh, I'll watch you all right," he told her. "I'm all eyes where you're concerned, Ann Marie."

He was. He never looked at anyone else—or at anything else—when she was around. His eyes were full of a sort of sick longing now as he followed her into her father's store.

Mr. Macy was a small gray man. His thin hair was gray and so was his wisp of a mustache. His eyes were blue-gray and very meek and mild behind his horn-rimmed spectacles. His shiny suit was gray. His necktie was cheap flimsy gray-and-black silk.

But his shop was as gay and bright-colored as it could be. It was lined with shelf after shelf of books in their brilliant bindings. Every light was covered with an orange-colored silk shade that had been made by the nimble fingers of his daughter, Ann Marie. The chairs had been painted a cheerful orange color, and there was a row of potted plants in the back window.

When Ann Marie and John Lawler opened the door of the shop he was standing behind the table where Christmas cards were on sale, counting them and stacking them in neat piles.

"Here are the ones you asked me for this noon," Ann Marie told him, and she laid a square white package on the table in front of him. "Just a hundred of them, Dad."

Mr. Macy nodded.

He was peering over the top of his glasses at John Lawler. He came around the table and held out his hand to him.

"How d'you do sir?" he asked, and John shook hands with him.

"Fine—how are you sir?" he asked. He was very brisk and hearty now—very much the young man of the world. "Saw you in the bank today, didn't I, Mr. Macy?"

Ann Marie's father seemed to become even smaller than he actually was. He gave a nervous little cough.

"Oh, yes! yes, indeed!" He answered almost too quickly. "Yes, I dropped in at the bank to see your father about—about a loan. A small loan . . . Yes, indeed!"

He rubbed his hands together as he talked. He was still beaming at John from behind his glasses, but there was something pleading in his look—something pathetic in his politeness toward the younger man.

Ann Marie's tender heart ached for him. She knew that he had a great many money troubles. She knew that he had put what her brother, Howard, called a "plaster" on the brown shingle house, and that he was always asking for little loans at Mr. Lawler's bank.

All afternoon she had been intending to ask him to pay her a couple of dollars for the Christmas cards she had been painting for him.

But now she suddenly changed her mind . . . It wouldn't hurt her to do some work for him once in a while and ask nothing for it, would it? Poor little Dad, trying so hard to make his book shop pay. Trying so hard to give his expensive family the things that other folks had—

"Dad, you look tired," she said, and laid one of her small capable hands over one of his for just a second. "Why don't you go home and lie down for an hour before supper? I'll look after the store."

She put up her hands to take off her hat. But he wouldn't let her stay.

He was very firm about it. "No. No," he said positively. "You're not going to work down here. Howdy's coming in at five o'clock to look after things. I'll come home then. You run along."

"At five?" Ann Marie lifted her eyes to the clock that hung on the wall above his head. "Why, Dad, it's ten minutes past now!"

But as she spoke the front door of the shop was thrown open, letting in a blast of cold wet air and her brother, Howard.

"Howdy" was 21—a year older than Ann Marie. He was tall and broad. His hair was jet black, his deep-set eyes were blue, and he had a fine Roman nose.

But he was not good-looking in the way a man ought to be good-looking. For his mouth was sulky, and his chin was weak.

Howdy "went around" with Florence Lawler, and for six months he had been a cashier in the bank. He and John Lawler were great pals.

His first words now were for John. "Just came from your house," he said.

John laughed. "Tell me something I don't know, will you?"

Then they both laughed, as if there were something terribly funny in the fact that Howdy was at the Lawler house to see Florence, morning, noon and night.

Mr. Macy trotted to the back of the shop and began to get into his shiny black overcoat.

"Look here, young fellow," he said to his son, "You stick here in the shop until I get back. No running out to get supper while I'm gone . . . Understand?"

"I get you, Dad."

He put his hand on the knob of the door to open it for his father. But he did not open it.

He began to laugh again and held out his other hand.

"What's the outlook for a little touch, Dad?" he asked. "I sure could use five bucks if you've got that much on you."

Mr. Macy hesitated for a second. Then his hand went slowly into his trousers' pocket and came out with a two-dollar bill in it.

"That's all I have just now, Howdy," he said, handing it over, "I sent everything I had over to the bank at three o'clock. There's only a little silver in the cash drawer."

"Rotten luck," was Howdy's only comment. Without a word of thanks he crushed the money into his own pocket and opened the door for his father.

"Gosh-a-mighty, the Old Boy's getting to be tight with his coin," he said as soon as the door had swung shut. "Expects me to hang around the store for a couple of hours at a stretch, whenever he wants to beat it. . . But whenever I need a little money—"

"You get it." Ann Marie finished his sentence for him. "He's just given you two dollars for two hours' work—and that's mighty good pay, Howard Macy! You ought to be ashamed to say that Dad's tight!"

Her voice, usually soft and husky, was sharp and shrill for once. Her eyes were a burning blue between their thick dark lashes as they flashed with indignation.

Howdy laughed. "You don't need to spit fire at me, kid," he said lazily. "I'm not going to let the Old Boy work me the way he works you. Half the time he never gives you a nickel for the cards you paint for him. . . . Now does he?"

But Ann Marie wouldn't answer him.

"Come along, Johnny, if you're going to take me home," she said to John Lawler, and marched out of the store.

"I can't imagine what Howdy does with his own money—the money he earns at the bank," she went on when they were standing outside in the shelter of the doorway.

"He doesn't make very much," John told her, lighting a cigaret. "Not even as much as I do—and I don't make anything. I'm so poor that I couldn't even have a car if my Dad didn't kick in with a little cash once in a while."

Ann Marie looked him over, measuring him, taking him in point by point—his expensive-looking gray hat, his blue linen shirt with collar to match, his tailormade clothes, his platinum watch-chain, the diamond in his signet ring.

"Yes, but your father is a very rich man, Johnny," she said solemnly, "And our Dad—Howdy's and mine—is as poor as Job's turkey. Howdy hasn't any right to ask him for a cent. Instead of that, he ought to be helping Dad a little."

Before she had finished talking she saw that he was only half-listening to her.

Then he looked from it to her face. His eyes had darkened and they met hers with a sort of hunger in them. She saw his nostrils quiver as he drew his breath in quickly, keenly.

"Come along," he said and took her arm, drawing her close to him as he never had tried to draw her before.

The roadster waited for them at the curbstone, its side-curtains on, all warm and dark and snug.

Ann Marie shook her head . . . She didn't want to climb into that roadster just then and she wasn't going to! For some sixth sense told her that if she did, Johnny Lawler was going to make love to her as sure as Fate!—And she didn't want him to.

"Wait a minute, Johnny," she said, one foot on the step of the roadster, "I want to look into that show-window across the street."

And before he could say a word to stop her she was running across the wet pavement to the other side of Front street.

In the middle of the brightly lighted show window was a pair of yellow stockings—pale yellow fishnet stockings just the color of Ann Marie's one and only dancing dress. The dress that she was going to wear to the Country Club dance on Christmas Eve.

A price tag was fastened on them. They were just two dollars. . . . Only two dollars, and she had intended to ask her father for two dollars for her afternoon's work! . . .

She turned away from the window and started slowly back to the car.

Johnny stood beside it, waiting for her. His cigaret glowed like a red star in the darkness.

He held open the door of the roadster and she got into it. He dropped down on the leather seat beside her and slammed the door. The windshield was covered with raindrops that ran down the glass on the outside. Raindrops pattered on the top of the little car. . . . It was very dark inside.

But even in the darkness Ann Marie could tell that Johnny Lawler was looking at her very hard and earnestly—intently.

"Ann Marie," he said.

His arms went around her.

"Don't! Ann Marie shook her head, "I don't want you to."

Soldiers in Hospital Die Faster Than the Nurses Can Cope With Them

CHAPTER XXX.

THERE are eight men in our rooms. Peter, a curly, black-haired fellow, has the worst injury—a severe lung wound. Franz Wachter, alongside him, has a shot in the arm which doesn't look too bad at first.

But the third night he calls out to us, telling us to sing. He thinks he has a hemorrhage.

I ring loudly. The night sister does not come. We have been making rather heavy demands on her during the night, because we have all been freshly bandaged, and so have a good deal of pain. One wants his leg placed so, another so, a third wants water, a fourth wants her to shake up his pillow—in the end the buxom old body grumbled bad-temperedly and slammed the doors. Now no doubt she thinks it is something of the same sort and so she is not coming.

We wait. Then Franz says: "Ring again."

I do so. Still she does not put in an appearance. In our wing there is only one night sister, perhaps she has something to do in one of the other rooms. "Franz, are you sure you are bleeding?" I ask. "Otherwise we shall be getting cursed again."

"The bandage is wet. Can't anybody make a light?"

That cannot be done either. The switch is by the door and none of us can stand up. I hold my thumb against the button of the bell till it becomes numb. Perhaps the sister has fallen asleep. They certainly have a great deal to do and are overworked day after day. And added to that is the everlasting praying.

"Should we smash a bottle?" asks Josef Hamacher of the shooting license.

"She wouldn't hear that any more than the bell."

At last the door opens. The old lady appears, mumbling. When she perceives Franz's trouble she begins to bustle, and says: "Why did not someone say I was wanted?"

"We did ring. And none of us here can walk."

He has been bleeding badly and she binds him up. In the morning we look at his face, it has become sharp and yellow, whereas the evening before he looked almost healthy. Now a sister comes oftener.

Sometimes there are Red Cross voluntary-aid sisters. They are pleasant, but often rather unskilled. They frequently give us pain when remaking our beds, and then are so frightened that they hurt us still more.

The nuns are more reliable. They know how they must take hold of us, but we would be more pleased if they were somewhat more cheerful. A few of them have real spirit, they are superb. There is no one who would not do anything for Sister Libertine, this marvelous sister, who spreads good cheer through the whole wing even when she can only be seen in the distance. And there are others like her. We would go through fire for her. A man cannot really complain, here he is treated by the nuns exactly like a civilian. On the other hand, just to think of a garrison hospital gives a man the creeps.

Franz Wachter does not regain his strength. One day he is taken away and does not come back. Josef Hamacher knows all about it: "We shan't see him again. They have put him in the Dead Room."

"What do you mean, Dead Room?" asks Kropp.

"Well, Dying Room—"

"What is that, then?"

"A little room at the corner of the building. Whoever is about to kick the bucket is put in there. There are two beds in it. It is generally called the Dying Room."

"But what do they do that for?"

"They don't have so much work to do afterwards. It is more convenient, too, because it lies right beside the lift to the mortuary. Perhaps also they do it for the sake of the others, so that no one in the ward dies in sympathy. And they can look after him better, too, if he is by himself."

"But what about him?"

Josef shrugs his shoulders. "Usually he doesn't take much notice any more."

"Does everybody know about it then?"

"Anyone who has been here long enough knows, of course."

In the afternoon Franz Wachter's bed has a fresh occupant. A couple of days later they take the new man away, too. Josef makes a significant gesture. We see many come and go.

Often relatives sit by the beds and weep or talk softly and awkwardly. One old woman will not go away, but she cannot stay there the whole night through. Another morning she comes very early, but not early enough; for as she goes up to the bed, someone else is in it already. She has to go to the mortuary. The apples that she has brought with her she gives to us.

And then little Peter begins to get worse. His temperature chart looks bad, and one day the flat trolley stands beside his bed. "Where to?" he asks.

"To the bandaging ward."

He is lifted out. But the sister makes the mistake of removing his tunic from the hook and putting it on the trolley too, so that she should not have to make two journeys. Peter understands immediately and tries to roll off the trolley. "I'm stopping here!"

They push him back. He cries out feebly with his shattered lung. "I won't go to the Dying Room."

"But we are going to the bandaging ward."

"Then what do you want my tunic for?" He can speak no more. Hoarse, agitated, he whispers: "Stopping here!"

They do not answer but wheel him out. At the door he tries to raise himself up. His black curly head sways, his eyes are full of tears. "I will come back again! I will come back again!" he cries.

The door shuts. We are all excited; but we say nothing. At last Josef says: "Many a man has said that. Once a man is in there, he never comes through."

I am operated on and vomit for two days. My bones will not grow together, so the surgeon's secretary says. Another fellow's have grown crooked; his are broken again. It is disgusting.

Among our new arrivals there are two young soldiers with flat feet. The chief surgeon discovers them on his rounds, and is overjoyed. "We'll soon put that right," he tell them, "we will just do a small operation, and then you will have perfectly sound feet. Enter them down, sister."

As soon as he is gone, Josef, who knows everything, warns then: "Don't you let him operate on you! That is a special scientific stunt of the old body's. He goes absolutely crazy whenever he can get hold of anyone to do it on. He operates on you for flat feet, and there's no mistake, you don't have them any more; you have club feet instead, and have to walk all the rest of your life on sticks."

"What should a man do, then?" asks one of them.

"Say no. You are here to be cured of your wound, not your flat feet. Did you have any trouble with them in the field? No, well, there you are! At present you can still walk, but if once the old boy gets you under the knife you'll be cripples. What he wants is little dogs to experiment with, so the war is a glorious time for him, as it is for all the surgeons. You take a look down below at the staff; there are a dozen fellows hobbling around that he has operated on. A lot of them have been here all the time since '14 and '15. Not a single one of them can walk better than he could before, almost all of them worse, and most only with plaster legs. Every six months he catches them again and breaks their bones afresh, and every time is going to be the successful one. You take my word, he won't dare to do it if you say no."

"Ach, man," says one of the two unfortunates, "better your feet than your brain-box. There's no telling what you'll get if you go back out there again. They can do with me just as they please, so long as I get back home. Better to have a club foot than be dead."

The other, a young fellow like ourselves, won't have it done. One morning the old man has the two hauled up and lectures and jaws at them so long, that in the end they consent. What else could they do?—They are mere privates, and he is a big bug. They are brought back chloroformed and plastered.

It is going badly with Albert. They have taken him and amputated his leg. The whole leg has been taken off from the thigh. Now he hardly speaks any more. Once he says he will shoot himself the first time he can get hold of his revolver again.

A new convoy arrives. Our room gets two blind men. One of them is a very youthful musician. The sisters never have a knife with them when they feed him; he has already snatched one from a sister. But in spite of this caution there is an incident. In the evening, while he is being fed, the sister is called away, and leaves the place with the fork on his table. He gropes for the fork, seizes it and drives it with all his force against his heart, then he snatches up a shoe and strikes with it against the handle as hard as he can. We call for help and three men are necessary to take the fork away from him. The blunt prongs had already penetrated deep. He abuses us all night so that no one can go to sleep. In the morning he has lockjaw.

Again beds become empty. Day after day goes by with pain and fear, groans and death gurgles. Even the Death Room is no use any more, it is too small; fellows die during the night in our room. They go even faster than the sisters can cope with them.

But one day the door flies open, the flat trolley rolls in, and there on the stretcher, pale, thin, upright and triumphant, with his shaggy head of curls sits Peter. Sister Libertine with beaming looks pushes him over to his former bed. He is back from the Dying Room. We have long supposed him dead.

He looks round: "What do you say now?"

And even Josef has to admit that it is the first time he has ever known of such a thing.

Today's installment of "Forest Love" and Petted Patty appear elsewhere in this issue.

THE terms junior and senior senator refer to their continuous service in the United States Senate, and not to ages or terms. The senior senator from a state is the senator who has had more continuous service in the Senate than the other, who is called the junior senator.

Irons in Africa

ALTHOUGH the use of household electrical appliances in the Union of South Africa is not widespread, the electric iron has become popular and is used by nearly all housewives living in a city where current is available. The natives, however, continue to use the old-fashioned iron.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Laughing People

NEXT to ready cash, nothing will get you quite so much in this world as a ready laugh.

I don't mean a Mona Lisa sneer or a simian grin or a nervous giggle or a hyena ha-ha, or an ear-splitting guffaw. I mean a light-hearted, good-natured, spontaneous laugh. A responsive, understanding, flattering smile. A musical ripple or a cheerful chuckle.

* * *

Easy laughing makes easy living. Easy laughter makes it easy for people to love you. The people we love best are not those who applaud our virtues, but those who laugh at our wit and admire your cleverness. Laughing people are always lovable people.

HELEN ROWLAND

Most of us detest "worthy and superior" people, because they are so busy being worthy and superior, that they haven't time to be gay and amiable. The Superior Soul who can register only a pained smile at your foolish pun or your feeble joke, doesn't IMPRESS you—he DEPRESSES you. He is as welcome as rain at a garden party. He is as rude as the boor who grunts "Humph!" when you beg his pardon. The person who listens to your airy persiflage with that "I dare you to make me laugh!" expression is the real summer blight.

The heart of a man warms right up to the girl whose eyes twinkle and whose laughter bubbles out spontaneously every time he makes a little "wise-crack." Lots of women laugh, just on principle, whenever a man pauses in the conversation. Whether they see the point or not, their intuition tells them unerringly, that it is the cue to break in with the laughter—or the applause.

That's one reason why so many men prefer morons to highbrows. A woman can have too MUCH intellect, to be congenial or comfortable to live with. A goose that cackles cheerfully is more comfortable to have around than an owl that hoots derisively. The brilliant young thing who just waits patiently for a man to get through talking, as she would wait for the band to go by, and then springs her own scintillating bon mot, doesn't dazzle him. She dashes him, or bores him, or irritates him.

Many a girl who might have had to spend her days between a shop-counter and a boarding house, has gone through life in a limousine and sable, just on the strength of a winning smile. A warm, radiant, irresistible smile! There is no other charm so potent!

Amiability is the royal road to popularity—and to love, friendship and an easy life. It brings the biggest returns for the least effort. It is the first law of courtesy.

* * *

Not to crack a smile at the person, who thinks he has said something amusing, is mentally high-hatting him. It may subdue his vanity; but it doesn't endear you to him. We don't love the self-elected critic, who deliberately sets out to increase our inferiority complex.

We love LAUGHING PEOPLE around the house, just as we love sunshine and bright curtains and window boxes. The first person you think of inviting to your house party is the cheerful soul who will ENJOY things, put kick into the cocktails, savor into the food and warm up the house.

* * *

We must all have our little cheer-leader in life, just as flowers must have sun. One of these makes us blossom, and warms our hearts clear down to the roots.

SUMMER'S VARIETY

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

A GIRL for every mood—so take your choice! In the Winter it's hard to find just the right girl for your mood of the moment, but in the Summertime! All a chap has to do is look how a girl is dressed and he can find just the right girl. Golf or swimming or dancing—each has its fair devotees and a man never need want for a partner.

If his mood be a frivolous one, there's the girl—all fluffy and frilly and not a serious thought in her pretty head except the music and froth that makes life worth while for her.

But sometimes he wants the quiet, restful sort of a girl and he can tell in a second just the girl he wants to be with.

Oh, it's an easy matter in the Summertime, for each little girl dresses for the part she wants to play. And here's the secret! She's so wise that she anticipates the mood of the male, and who knows but that she it is who sways his mood to match her own.

And Dan Cupid governs them both! And laughs delightfully when the two whom he has decreed shall start the path of Love and Romance together, find each other. For that's his job! And the Summertime is the time when he works hardest and puts all his subjects in the mood for Love.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Form of Eating

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly inform me if it is correct, after cutting one's food, to use the left hand, or transfer the fork to the right, in conveying the food to the mouth?

ETHEL.

EITHER is correct. The former is the more cosmopolitan manner of eating, and is used by cultivated people all over the world. It is usually called the non-fork-shifting method of eating. The latter is the custom of eating usually seen in America—the fork-shifting method of eating—but this method is rapidly giving way to the European method of eating. The disadvantage of the "everlasting" shifting of the fork to the right hand is that the method is fussy, full of unnecessary motions. Now that Americans are traveling more and observing the different ways of eating, many have adopted the non-fork-shifting method of eating.

Not Improper if Necessary

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

While sitting at the table with one of my new acquaintances I saw a girl friend across the room from me whom I had not seen in a year. I asked the young man with whom I was dining to excuse me while I went over and spoke to her. Was this improper for me to do? READER.

NO; but was it necessary? If you especially wished to give some message to this girl, it was quite correct to leave the table; but many girls cultivate the habit of leaving the table to speak to acquaintances at other tables, even if they do not particularly need to give a message at that time. It is apt to be very annoying to one's host, and should not be indulged in too much or too often.

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Mystery of Prince Georges' Shooting Grows.

I SPOKE only two words into the telephone receiver in answer to Lillian's cryptic message, relayed from her husband.

"All right," I said laconically and hanging up the receiver, turned to Mary who had slumped into a chair near the telephone. Now that there was nothing definite she could do to aid Noel in the hunt for Prince Georges so strangely missing after he had been shot, she was feeling the reaction of the terrible nervous strain to which she had been subjected.

"Come, dear," I said, putting my hand under her arm and pulling her to her feet. "We must get back to Noel."

She shook off her lethargy and quickened her pace.

"Oh, yes, hurry!" she said, almost running. "Suppose Noel should be gone, too. I—I—couldn't stand that, Auntie Madge."

I wished Noel could have heard the stress she laid upon the pronoun. Then I retracted the wish. Far better to permit the two "international romances" to pursue their uneven way until it was certain that both Prince Georges and Princess Olina had been cured of the "mental mumps and measles" to which Noel whimsically had likened Mary and himself. But even as I repeated that comment to myself I winced at my own unmeant callousness. It was entirely probable that the poor young prince was lying lifeless in some dark corner of the woods, forever immune to earthly love.

Neither Mary nor I spoke again until the lights of the car picked out Noel walking along the road, sending the rays of his flashlight ahead of him. When the lights apprised him of our nearness, he stepped out of the road and waited for us.

"This car hasn't stopped so far," he said. "It leaves a clear trail, and there isn't even a cobweb disturbed upon the entrances to the two wood trails I've seen."

"Good!" I said with emphasis. "Do you mind going on in the same way until we come to the junction of this road with the high road? The Underwoods will join us there presently. I'll keep just behind you with the car, stopping occasionally so the engine won't get heated up."

"I can walk pretty fast if I just keep on this trail," he rejoined. "Will you blow the horn when you come to a wood road? Then I'll run back and look the entrance over."

"We'll make much better time that way," I commented approvingly, and for the next quarter of an hour our odd little procession crawled along, going over the ground so thoroughly that when we reached the corner where we were to meet the Underwoods, we were practically certain of two things: The body of Prince Georges, dead or unconscious, was not lying in the woods lining the road, but was in the car whose tire tracks Noel had been following.

"Here is where it turned into the road," Noel said when we had reached Montauk highway. "It's gone west."

"Toward New York," Mary said with a catch of the breath, and I think we momentarily shared her horror of the young prince being rushed toward the great city which has so many warrens for hiding crime and criminals.

"Can it be traced further, Noel?" I asked, getting down from the car and joining him in looking at the smooth concrete surface of the main road. But I soon answered my own question in the negative. There were traces of the tire marks, but they were soon lost among the other marks of cars which had traveled both ways upon the broad highway.

The lights of a car in the distance sent us back into Noel's roadster, precipitately, for we did not wish to be seen examining the road. Luckily the trees made a thick shadow at our side of the bay road, so that no one of the passing cars spied us, and when Mr. Underwood drew his big car up at the corner, we alighted from the roadster and walked to main road before he saw us.

"Get in," he said quickly, opening the door, and we all clambered in, and he shut off all lights save the rear one.

"Pull that rear curtain down," he said, "and we'll pass for a necking party. Now dish the vegetables as quickly as you can."

In as few words as possible I retold Mary's story of the shooting of Prince Georges, of her futile efforts to revive him, of her race back to the restaurant, and then outlined our tracing of the car which had halted beside the prince's wrecked one, following a trail which had ended where we stood.

"That's ace high work," he commented approvingly. "Being sure that he wasn't tossed into the woods means that he's on the road west—I mean a compass point," he amended as Mary uttered a little stifled cry at the sadly familiar expression. "Now if you'll let me lamp those tracks a minute, we'll be on our way."

He got down briskly from the car, accompanied by Noel. "Come on Mary," Mr. Underwood said. "I need your bright eyes, too."

I knew that he had summoned the girl in order to give Lillian a chance to speak to me alone. And no sooner were they a few feet away than she spoke from the corner of her mouth noiselessly, in the method which criminals and detectives have mastered.

"Harry had word only an hour ago that something like this was going to happen," she said.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Stand Guard Against Babies' Germ Enemies.

IT IS necessary to use eternal vigilance if baby's health is to be guarded against watchful enemies. I wish it were possible to make health "catching," instead of having to worry over the dozens of diseases that may be caught.

DR. COPELAND

Since the feeding of the baby is the most important part of its life, strict attention must be given the feedings and the food. There are two things that must be kept in mind every hour of the day—the proper care of the feeding bottles and the proper care of the food. Attention to these will ward off disease.

Spoiled milk is the chief cause of illness in young children. I am sorry to say it is one of the chief causes of death. Knowing this fact, it behooves us to take not the slightest chance.

The first thing to do is to find a place where milk of known purity can be purchased. This is not difficult in a large city where the public health appropriations are large enough to make possible the supervision of the milk, from its place of production, right up to your very threshold.

It is more difficult in smaller communities.

You must make sure you are doing your best in this matter. Talk with your doctor, the county health official, or somebody who can really give accurate information regarding the milk. It is vital to the welfare of your child that clean milk, from a healthy cow, is provided for its feeding.

I am sorry that the popular idea about milk is that its "richness" is what determines its value. You may be shocked to learn the "cream line" is of little importance in selecting milk for an infant.

The milk from any cow is too rich. It must be diluted with water to make it like human milk. So the quantity of cream does not count much.

The important thing is to make sure the milk is free from dangerous germs or bacteria. It must come from a healthy cow. It must be cooled at once after the milking and be kept at low temperature from that time till it is time to prepare the baby's mixture.

Just how safe this milk will continue to be, depends on the temperature at which it is kept. Harmful germs do not multiply much so long as the temperature is below 50 degrees. If milk that is good to begin with, is kept at this point, it will stay good for 24 hours, until the next supply is delivered.

Attention to the feeding bottles and the milk will go far towards good health for your baby. You must not overlook this for a single day.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Saturday, August 17

THE astral forces for this day assist to very lively operations, with much initiative and enterprise following upon a long siege of obstruction and crystallization. Much progress should be made under this benefic rule, by hard work and bold strokes of attack; but be on guard against duplicity, fraud and slander. Keep the mind in resolute channels of thought.

Those whose birthday it is are assured an unusually lively and eventful year, following upon long, stagnant and obstructed conditions. This state of affairs should be tackled with resolution, enterprise and courage, but guard against fraud, trickery and slander.

A child born on this day may be bold, courageous, enterprising and at the same time may be practical and industrious. It may succeed through these qualities and firm application.

For little stomachs with too much acid

Children are especially subject to the ills of excess acid. Sour stomach, biliousness, lack of spirits, etc., are usually the result. Quickly corrected by pleasant tasting

BRIOSCHI

(Pronounced Bree-osky)

All children like its fizzy just sweet enough taste. Quickly neutralizes the acid condition and is gently laxative, cleansing the delicate system of impurities. Give your children Brioschi. They'll like it and the results of too much acid will never trouble them.

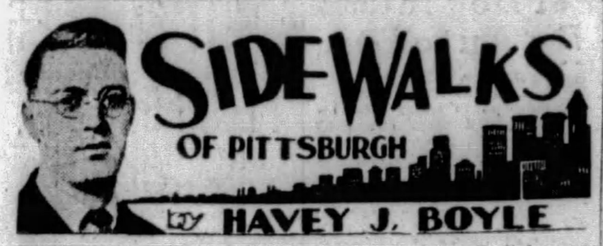
FIREMEN ON PARADE CHEERED BY THRONGS



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

THERE is one difficulty in connection with the traffic light system which needs correcting. At present the timing is bad. When one's car is stopped one just manages to get a cigaret out of the pack by the time the green light comes on. This should be changed so that the driver also would have time to light the cigaret. If you take time to light the cigaret and the green flashes just as you put the match to the cigaret the impatient drivers behind you sound their horns raucously and if they catch up to you confide the intelligence that you're a big bum, to put it politely. It may be argued that persons who don't smoke should not be held up by a longer flashing of the red stop light, but this isn't a sound argument. They could use the extra time for fastening more securely the corks in their gin bottles.

For a long time Pullman porters have been scaring passengers coming into Pittsburgh with the announcement, as they shake your blanket, that if they are not good boys and do not get up at once the bad railroad men will take them into the yards, but the other morning I went through the terror and came out none the worse for my experience. In fact, in the future when the porters threaten me with the yards, I'm just going to yawn and turn over on my other side.

FOR what happens is not bad at all. The engine simply backs your car out to Thirty-third street, from which point a short walk takes you to a Liberty avenue street car, which has you downtown in something approaching the well-known jiffy. Indeed, there are certain advantages in being taken to the yards. You have the whole washroom to yourself for one thing, in fact the whole car, and the porter is so anxious to get rid of you that he attends you as though you were a railroad official in your special car.

Rebellion broke out recently in the ranks of the William Penn Hotel bellboys. The boys, in spite of stooping for luggage, were developing paunches more becoming to aldermen and came forth a genius to order daily exercises for the bellhops. The boys, who tote the bags looked upon the order as not dissimilar to the advice of the physician who ordered his patient, a letter carrier, to do more walking for his health. A spirit of revolt grabbed hold of the bellhops and one intrepid spirit issued a defi. Enheartened by this display, others took up the cry of the enraged leader of the band, and the order was modified to read that while the daily dozen would not be compulsory, the boys who elected to take the course might stand a better chance of some day rising to the post of manager, by way of the desk-clerk route. But even such a bait failed to shake the bellhops out of their alleged lethargy so that now a week or so after the first bulletin was flashed the drill field is practically vacant.

AS IN so many other matters, form and style have gripped the men who operate the hotels, with especial reference to the bellhops. The boys do not report for duty in just casual fashion. In a retreat far from the eyes of the customers the boys assemble, take positions with military precision, and at the command of a ring-leader snap into it, and almost prance into the lobby.

It probably comes from the movies, this bellboy drill. The ushers in the movies began acting like West Point cadets, and by comparison the bellboys looked like ragged volunteers.

So a hotel man borrowed the book of discipline from the House of Ushers and grafted the contents onto the bellhops. Ushers are still a little in the lead for they accomplish politeness without the aid of a 15-cent or a quarter tip. The lowest rate for bellboy politeness is a dime, which buys very little of it.

TWO BOROUGHS TO VOTE ON MERGER

New Kensington, Parnassus Citizens to Decide on Proposed Consolidation

Citizens of Parnassus and New Kensington will vote on consolidating the two boroughs into a third class city at the general election in November. The ordinance providing for voting on the consolidation passed its third reading at a meeting of the Parnassus council last night.

New Kensington recently passed a similar ordinance. If the consolidation is approved at the election it will mark the establishment of the third class city of New Kensington, from which the borough of Arnold will be excluded. The Post-office Department on April 16, 1929, consolidated the three borough post-offices, Parnassus, New Kensington and Arnold, into the New Kensington office. They are adjoining boroughs and only natives can tell where one ends and the other begins.

The thoroughfares and numbered avenues run from Arnold through New Kensington and Parnassus without any change in their identities except a difference in the paving.

It is approximately three miles from the outer limits of Arnold to the outer limits of Parnassus and the territory covered by the boroughs averages about a mile in width from the Allegheny River.

Contained in this narrow strip of land are three separate municipalities, each with a burgess, council, tax collector, police department, fire department, school board and a couple of political factions.

Politics has played an important role in preventing the consolidation of the three boroughs in the past. The population of the new city would be about 25,000.

RAIDERS SEIZE STILL, AUTO

Prohibition agents yesterday seized an automobile and a still, and conducted a raid on a saloon in McKees Rocks.

Philip Feldman, 51, of 518 Sixth avenue, was arrested after several grips containing whisky had been seized in his automobile in Sixth avenue near Webster avenue, the agents said.

A 150-gallon still was found in a barn in Snowden Township along with 70 barrels of mash and large quantities of moonshine, the raiders reported. Nobody was found in the place. A small quantity of moonshine was confiscated in a saloon at 333 Helen street McKees Rocks, where Anthony Krulac, 40, was arrested, according to the agents.

Veteran McKeesport Mail Carrier Dies

John Martin, 57, of 2005 Baldwin avenue, McKeesport, a veteran letter carrier with a record of 23 years' service, died Wednesday at the McKeesport Hospital following an illness of a week. He became ill of ptomaine poisoning and was taken to the hospital where he died. He was one of McKeesport's best known residents. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Catherine Martin, and two sons and a daughter, Private Clarence D. Martin of the Marine detachment, U. S. S. Saratoga, San Pedro, Cal., and John and Lucille Martin, both at home.

PARADING FIREMEN HAILED IN EAST PITTSBURGH

TARENTUM VOLUNTEERS WINNING HONORS FOR BEST APPEARANCES
East Pittsburgh's population laying all aside to watch the parade of Western Pennsylvania volunteer firemen, in convention there today. This portion of parade shows Tarentum braves, at Electric and Linden avenues, adjudged best-appearing company.

VOLUNTEERS AWARDED PRIZES

Mummers March and Water Battle Finals Features on Convention Bill Tonight

With sirens screaming, thousands of Western Pennsylvania Volunteer Firemen staged a giant parade through the streets of East Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon.

The shining trucks and the men in full regalia, and the martial tunes of the bands, drew cheers from the crowds lining the course of the march. Every kind of apparatus, ancient and modern, large and small, was included in the 120 companies making up the spectacle, which required more than two hours to pass the reviewing stand.

Spectators gathered in windows, on balconies, roofs and fire escapes long before the parade started.

LATROBE JUNIORS WIN

The Latrobe Junior Fire Department, consisting of about 75 boys, and two girl drum majors, all between the ages of 7 and 14, was a unique entry which carried off two prizes. The Ladies' Auxiliary from Arnold took first place, while Whitaker entered the oldest piece of fire fighting equipment.

A complete list of prize winners follows:

Best appearing band, New Kensington and Arnold; best appearing fife and drum corps, Tarentum and Mt. Pleasant; best appearing company, Tarentum and Meyersdale; largest uniformed company, Tarentum; company coming longest distance, Meyersdale; best appearing motor-driven heavy pumper, Brownsville; best appearing motor-driven light pumper, Baldwin Township; best appearing apparatus without pumper, Stowe Township, No. 4; oldest piece of apparatus without pumper, Whitaker; best home-built apparatus, New Kensington; best equipped truck, Etna; best Negro brigade, Glendale; best motor-driven hook-and-ladder, Vandergrift; best camp, New Kensington and Connellsville; best ladies' auxiliary, Arnold and Monessen; oldest man in parade, Louis Knabe, 86, of Turtle Creek; tallest man in parade, C. F. Gilchrist (6 feet 7 inches), of Port Vue; smallest man in parade, Joseph Zalec (4 feet, 4 inches), of Versailles; heaviest man, Ross Yost (314 pounds), of Uniontown; junior fire department, Latrobe; junior band or drum corps, Latrobe.

WATER BATTLE FINALS

More than 12 hours' excitement has been arranged for today. Particularly interesting will be the motor races, consisting of hill-climbing contests, and straightaway service races at 10 a. m. The Fromite child demonstration was to take place at 2 p. m. Ladies' auxiliaries were to be entertained at a theater party at 2:30 p. m. in the Rivoli Theater. At 3 p. m. the Equitable Gas Company's first aid team was to give an exhibition.

The final championship water battles are scheduled for tonight, followed by a mummers' parade.

Clairton Highways Being Resurfaced

Motorists from the upper Monongahela River towns are praising the county commissioners for the recent improvements to the Clairton highway. The road along the Monongahela from Clairton to Dravosburg has been closed for two months during which time workmen have entirely resurfaced the avenue, eliminated dips and dangerous curves and widened the road. The Clairton-Carrick road is undergoing similar improvements. The road is open to autoists during the evening.

Hearst-Zeppelin-'Round-the-World Flight

Zeppelin Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,
Pittsburgh:

Here is my entry in the Hearst-Zeppelin-'Round-the World Flight Contest:

The Zeppelin will make the trip around the world in ..... hours .... minutes flying time.

The Zeppelin will travel from Friedrichshafen, Germany, to Tokio, Japan, in ..... hours .... minutes.

The Zeppelin will travel from Tokio to Los Angeles, Cal., in .... hours ..... minutes.

The Zeppelin will travel from Los Angeles to Lakehurst, N. J., in hours ..... minutes.

My slogan for the trip is .....

Signed .....

Address .....

How Long Will It Take Zep to Circle World?

The Graf Zeppelin is over Soviet Russia on its trip around the world, sponsored by William Randolph Hearst. With its passage into this enormous Communistic state, the final day for receipt in the Sun-Telegraph offices of estimates as to the elapsed time required on the flight from Friedrichshafen to Tokio is on hand.

These answers with accompanying slogans must be in the hands of the Sun-Telegraph Hearst-Zeppelin editor before midnight tonight.

Estimates of the time required to cover the next two laps, those from Tokio to Los Angeles and Los Angeles to Lakehurst, will be received at the Sun-Telegraph offices until the closing dates for those answers, which will be announced as soon as possible.

Computations as to the effects of the elements on speeding or retarding the huge lighter-than-air craft, with some account taken of chance, will be most likely to score highest. All Pittsburgh has taken to these speed and distance figures. Brains are being racked for suitable slogans describing the flight.

What will be the slogans adjudged best by the Sun-Telegraph Hearst-Zeppelin editor? Who will nearest approach a good estimate of the elapsed time of the entire voyage and its intermediate laps?

REDS TO DEFY POLICE HERE

Refusing to hold their meetings at the places designated by Director James M. Clark of the Public Safety Department, Communists tonight will hold two gatherings at the places they have selected themselves. This was announced by Patrick Devine, local Communist organizer.

The meetings will be held at Butler and Forty-sixth streets and at Union avenue and East Ohio street. Devine and several other leaders of the organization here will be the speakers.

Yesterday Devine called upon Clark and asked for permits for meetings at the two places. Clark and Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh declared the locations unsuitable and recommended Schenley Oval and Columbus avenue and St. Ives streets, North Side, as good locations.

Devine expressed dissatisfaction with the arrangements and left the City-County Building without having came to an understanding with the safety heads. Last night after conferring with fellow party leaders he announced the meetings would be held against the police heads' advice.

Kennedy Family To Hold Reunion

The annual reunion of the descendants of John and Nancy Euwer Kennedy and their friends will be held Saturday, August 24, at Pfeffer's Grove, Cheswick. It is expected that several hundred descendants and their friends will attend.

VETS GET FREE PICNIC TICKETS

Further facts about the ninth annual Sun-Telegraph reunion for veterans of American wars have been released by the general committee, of which John S. Hall is chairman.

The get-together, which will be held on August 31 at Kennywood Park, will attract throngs of veterans from every part of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Eastern Ohio, Hall states. Free tickets to the biggest of the park's attractions will be presented to the vets upon submission of evidence of their service in American wars.

Service men are invited to wear their uniforms, which will be taken as ample proof of identity with American forces. Discharge buttons, buttons of service organizations such as the American Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic, and the United Spanish War Veterans will be acceptable, however.

Red Cross workers, the committee announces, will be present to join in the festivities and to render any first aid work necessary. Salvation Army lassies will distribute doughnuts and coffee to the frolickers. Knights of Columbus and Y. M. C. A. workers will participate.

The Sun-Telegraph will carry daily details of the plans for this mammoth reunion of all American service men and women as they are revealed by the committees of service men in charge of the arrangements. Watch for them.

Ladies' Aid Holds All Day Meeting

An all day meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Lutheran Church, Bellevue, was held in the Sunday school rooms of the church yesterday. A meeting of the church council will be held tonight for the discussion of business in connection with the church.

Deserving Boys Sent To Mountain Camp

Various Rotary clubs in the East Boroughs Scout Council, which includes the towns of Wilkinsburg, Edgewood, Swissvale, Rankin, Braddock, East Pittsburgh, Turtle Creek, Wilmerding, Pitcairn, Trafford, Verona, Oakmont and Universal, will underwrite the entire expense of sending several hundred deserving youngsters to the Council's new scout camp, Twin-Echo, near Ligonier.

In selecting the boys eligible to accept their generosity, committees have been appointed to name only those boys who would otherwise be denied a vacation. The Rotarians in charge of these selection committees have already reported much success in finding large numbers of non-scouts, worthy, though financially unable to take advantage of camping, or even scouting itself. These lads, with their parents' consent, of course, have been mobilized and will leave for the scouts' mountain retreat tomorrow.

TRANSPORTATION PAID

Transportation to the camp has been arranged by the Rotarians, who, in several instances, plan to send the boys from their respective localities by motor coach, while others plan to deliver the boys in their own cars.

Regardless of how the trip is made, there boys have in store for them many days of happiness in the healthful mountain climate under the careful guidance of Twin-Echo's camp director, John Danton, and his staff of associates. All that is required of the boys entering camp is that they subject themselves to a rigid physical examination which is also made available through the generosity of the Rotarians.

These boys, many of whom have never had the opportunity to leave their own towns, will be accorded every privilege of a regular scout during their stay at Twin-Echo, the scouts themselves having abandoned camp in order that ideal accommodations may be made for their gugests.

WILL FILL QUOTA

According to Camp Director John Danton, the books of Camp Twin-Echo already show that Wilkinsburg Rotarians have made reservations for 25 to 30 boys, while Braddock and Turtle Creek Rotary Clubs have registered 40 boys each Swissvale Rotarians have not as yet announced their quota, but it is expected that this group, with those boys selected by other clubs, whose reports are still outstanding, will fill the camp to capacity.

Will Rogers Says

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Aug. 16.

This is Santa Barbara on fiesta week, all Spanish buildings, Spanish costumes, beautiful horses and silver-mounted saddles.

It is the only town in our country that is being kept unique in building. It had a quake a few years ago.

If some of these standard built towns could show such originality it would almost make you in favor of earthquakes.

Yours, WILL.

SLASHING OF PAIR ATTRIBUTED TO LABOR ARGUMENT

POLICE ARREST FOUR AFTER COLLISION

Employes at Allis-Chalmers Plant Crash Into Car And Bloody Fight Follows

Four men were being held by Woods Run police today as a result of a fight at Liverpool and Gironde streets, last night, in which two men were cut. Police attributed the altercation to labor trouble.

The fight occurred, police said, when an automobile in which John J. Cole, 38, of 2300 Fifth avenue, and J. J. Murphy, 35, of 212 Sycamore street, employes of the Allis-Chalmers Company, Juniata street, figured in a collision with one in which Edward Waldron, 21, of 1926 Metropolitan street, and H. F. Beymer, 25, of 1927 St. Ives street, were riding. The four men engaged in a fight, according to police.

One of the participants, the police said, drew a knife. Murphy was slashed on the hand and James Dewey, of 2322 Atmore street, was stabbed in the chest. Dewey disappeared before police arrived, they said.

Cole and Murphy later were arrested in Sheffield street, on suspicious person charges. Waldron and Beymer also were taken into custody on like charges, the officers reported.

Two companions of Murphy and Cole, who took part in the fight, escaped.

PILOT ESCAPES IN PLANE SLIP

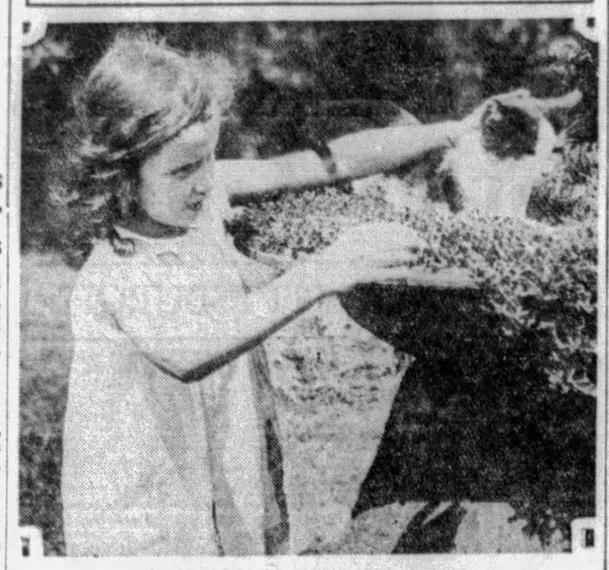
Neil Stewart, piloting an airplane for the Southern Sugar Company, had a narrow escape from injury late yesterday, when a wing of his plane caught on the ground when he made a forced landing at Mayer Field after his engine developed trouble. The wing and landing gear were broken.

The plane was in a side slip when the wing caught, and it ran 150 feet along the field before being stopped. Stewart was making a return trip to Brooklyn.

Police Veterans To Picnic Aug. 25

More than 500 persons from Western Pennsylvania are expected to attend the second annual outing of the Veteran Police Association at Meyer's Farm on Large road, Sunday, August 25. John Hardiman will be general chairman of the outing.

"THANK YOU, PUFF"



ROSEMARY NOONAN AND "PUFF"

Tendering grateful thanks to "Puff" is curly-haired Rosemary, whose home edges on the woods of Mt. Savage, Md. "Puff" shuns the fugitive mice but keeps the district free of snakes. Already eight copper-head snakes have bit the dust, figuratively, literally.

ARREST SOUGHT IN BOY CASE

A warrant was to be issued today for the arrest of W. C. (Pinkie) Irwin, proprietor of a poolroom, at 628 Brookline boulevard, charging him with keeping a gambling house, police said.

Carl Anderson, 18, of 322 Templeton street, one of five Brookline boys arrested several days ago in connection with a series of neighborhood robberies, testified at a hearing in Morals Court that he lost $10 playing a slot machine in the place. This was why he returned to the poolroom, he said. Magistrate A. D. Brandon, after hearing the testimony, announced that a warrant for Irwin would be issued.

Anderson along with the others was held for court on charges of robbery.

Triple Link Club Formed at Clairton

The Triple Link Club has been organized in Clairton with a modern Odd Fellows temple in Clairton as the ultimate goal. The following officials have been duly installed:

President, Charles E. Kaltenbach; vice president, Lloyd S. Smoyer; secretary, Martin W. Craighead; treasurer, J. S. Marks; assistant treasurer, William B. Lancaster; trustees, Max Hirshberg, William Griffith and Harry A. Lash.

SCOUTS PLAN OUTING

A 'father and son picnic' will be held in September for members of the Clairton boy scout troops, under the auspices of the Scout Service Club of Clairton.

The committee headed by President Samuel H. Sharpnack are arranging a program of sports, and drills with a boy scout demonstration. Assisting him in the work are Leslie B. Guthrie, Robert B. Voorhies, Carl Leis, Fred P. Loundsburg, deputy scout commissioner in the McKeesport and Affiliated Territory, and all the scout masters of the eight troops. Nearly 50 local boys have returned from one week camp visits at Camp Aliquippa under the direction of the Clairton Scout Service Club.

St. Paul Orphans To Have Jamboree

Chartiers Council, Knights of Columbus tomorow afternoon and night will play host to 700 children from St. Paul's orphanage, when the annual jamboree is held on the asylum grounds. A program of sports and novelty events will feature the entertainment. A concert will be given by Pittsburgh Letter Carriers Band and a picnic dinner will be served on the lawn. Clarence J. Howley is general chairman.

VOTING PLACES CHANGED BY COURT

Judges Also Kept Busy in Filling Many Vacancies On Boards of Election

Appointment of election officers to fill vacancies and changing of polling places to more suitable addresses continues to occupy attention in Quarter Session Court as the time for the mayoralty election approaches.

David R. Sterritt, of Evergreen road, was named judge of the newly created Twenty-eighth election district of the Twenty-sixth Ward, and Anthony Enz, Ivory avenue, was appointed majority inspector by Judge Harry H. Rowand.

Frank Haslage, Van Buren avenue, was appointed judge of the Twenty-seventh District of the Twenty-sixth Ward. James Hite, Monroe avenue, was made inspector.

William N. Lamb, 1414 Meadow street, was appointed judge of the Tenth District of the Seventh Ward. McKeesport, vice A. E. Deitrich, resigned. The polling place of the Sixth District of the Fifteenth Ward was changed from 810 Lilac street to 910 Lilac street.

The Eighth District, Twentieth Ward, polling place was changed from 22 Ainsworth street to 12 Ainsworth street. The polling place of the Fifth District of the Third Ward was changed from Clark and Shomin street to 1208 Hazel street.

CHURCH HOLDS CELEBRATION

More than 20,000 persons are expected to attend Old Home Week to be celebrated by Holy Cross Church, South Thirty-second and Carson streets, opening tomorrow and continuing until August 24. Former parishoners from various parts of the city will return to the South Side to mingle with old friends during the celebration.

A varied program of entertainment has been arranged by the committee in charge. Committeemen include Daniel Murphy, Peter Schmidt, Patrick McCann, John Kornbauer, Sr., Harry Schadler, James Haughey and Patrick Cagney. Mrs. George Foyle will be in charge of the lunch stand and Miss Margaret Hogan in charge of the sodality stand.

A teacher at Arsenal Trade School, she also is taught, for she has just won a degree of M. A. at Duquesne University and plans to return to become a Doctor of Philosophy.

Truck Driver to Give Bond in Fatal Crash

Michael Sutch, a truck driver, of 525 Bessemer avenue, East Pittsburgh, will post bond before the coroner today pending the inquest into the death of Sam Visco, 22, of 300 Cliff street, East Pittsburgh. Visco died in the Braddock General Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered when a truck on which he was riding with Sutch, struck a pole in Bell avenue, North Braddock.

Bank Receiver May Sell Property

Jesse R. Scott, receiver of the Citizens National Bank of Waynesburg, was authorized in an order signed by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to sell 25 lots in West Meade Township, Crawford County, of which the bank holds title, to James J., George H. and Donald Brock, for $3,350.

POOL OPENING DATE SET

Plans are being formulated for the opening soon of the $100,000 swimming pool being constructed at Clairton. Work on the project has been delayed for a month due to the non-arrival of material. One of the features of the pool will be the under water indirect lighting system for night swimming.

The project was fostered by the Lions Club and was later indorsed by Mayor W. B. Farnsworth and the city council, who appropriated the necessary funds. A tentative date, September 15, has been set for the opening, at which time it is thought the work will have been sufficiently completed to insure a few weeks of swimming. City Councilman Vann E. Ohl, in charge of parks and public improvements, has directed the work.

Pet Dog Injured By Auto Bites Young Master

A pet dog, in agony from injuries suffered when struck by an automobile, yesterday bit his young master who was befriending him.

Richard Smith, 7, of 1530 Hatteras street, North Side, saw his dog, Teddy, run down by an automobile at Lowry and DeHaven streets. The child ran and picked up his pet and the dog bit the lad on the right cheek. The dog died a few minutes later and the boy was taken to a physician's office for treatment.

CRUSHED, SUES FOR $50,000

Damages of $50,000 for a shattered leg and injured spine, are asked by Francis Lel Joos, of Pearl street, in a suit on file today in Common Pleas Court against John Anderson, 425 North Highland avenue.

Joos alleges that while he was standing in the doorway of a garage at 4748 Liberty avenue March 14 Anderson came east in Liberty avenue in an automobile which jumped the curbstone and crushed him against the garage.

MARTIN MAKES PLEA FOR VOTE OF WOMEN

Mayoralty Candidate Gives Administration Outline In South Side Address

"I feel that I have the right to ask not only the support, but the active work of the women of Pittsburgh in this contest," said Judge Richard W. Martin, candidate for the Republican nomination for mayor, in an address delivered last night.

He was speaking before a gathering of women of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Wards at the home of Mrs. Agnes Cieslewicz, 82 South Twelfth street. Mrs. Cieslewicz introduced Judge Martin.

"The type of administration that I intend to give is one that will make Pittsburgh safer for its home-loving people," Judge Martin continued. "It will not cramp and restrict them in their activities in life. When the women of Pittsburgh go to the polls to vote, they should bear in mind one question and one question only: Which candidate will best promote the welfare of their city and the interests of their children?"

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book 'Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

OFFER TO SERVE WIFE'S RUM TERM WINS MAN PAROLE

PAIR LET OFF TO CARE FOR CHILDREN

Husband's Effort to Save Wife from Prison for Liquor Sale Gets Freedom

A parole was Judge Harry H. Rowand's answer when a young husband offered in Criminal Court to serve both his own and his wife's sentence for selling moonshine, so that the wife could stay at home and care for their two small children.

Andy Jaworsky, 29, a miner, of Long Run road, near McKeesport, and Edna Mae Jaworsky, his wife, the defendants, said they were no relation to the bandit, Paul Jaworski, recently electrocuted. They pleaded guilty to an indictment charging they had sold moonshine whisky to Charles Stewart, a county detective, on August 2, charging 75 cents for a half-pint.

Jaworsky has a small refreshment stand and said he had only sold 12 pints of liquor before being arrested. The wife led the children, 4 and 6 years of age, into the court. She said she had been out on bail, but her husband had been in jail since their arrest.

PLAZA BUILDING SALE BRINGS LAW SUIT

Simon Seeks Right to Buy Back Building from New York Man at Fair Price

To enable him to buy back the Plaza Building at a reasonable price within a reasonable time, Attorney J. I. Simon, original promoter and president of the Plaza Office Building Company has filed a bill in equity in Common Pleas Court against Elmer E. Beek, of New York, by whom the title to the building now is held.

When the Plaza Building Company was unable to meet interest due on $819,000 first mortgage bonds, underwritten by Hayden, Stone and Company, New York, last May 1, Beek, as their representative, bought in the building under foreclosure proceedings.

In his suit Simon says Beck sought co-operation in the transaction, and to protect the Plaza stockholders, Simon says he made an oral agreement with Beek whereby he was to be given a reasonable time in which to buy back the property. The suit seeks to restrain Beek from further incumbering the building and to have the court rule that the oral agreement as to the re-purchase is binding for a reasonable length of time.

Aged Pair, Gone From Home 45 Years, Return

After an absence of 45 years, Mr. and Mrs. Fremont McLean, of Roundup, Mont., Wednesday visited Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Cloman, Greenock's oldest residents.

Prior to their departure for the West, Mr. and Mrs. McLean owned and resided in the home now occupied by Charles Renckly and owned by Charles Haberlin. Mr. Haberlin and Mr. McLean were boyhood chums. Mr. McLean is 74 and Mrs. McLean 73. They made the trip from Montana by automobile, Mr. McLean driving. They also visited their old homestead and had a drink from the old well.

The aged couple departed in the evening by automobile for South Carolina to visit their daughter there.

PLAN FOR NEW JAIL HIT BY M'GOVERN

Opposes Brown's Suggestion For Building of Prison On Property at Parkview

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern yesterday entered strong objection to the proposal of Public Works Director Norman F. Brown that the county construct a new county jail on the property at Parkview.

The proposal was made at the County Commissioners' meeting. McGovern said he didn't like the idea of any building at Parkview having "cell blocks like a penitentiary."

Brown proposed to build one wing at Parkview with additions to be made later when needed. It also has been proposed to use the old county buildings at Parkview for short term prisoners. No action was taken on the matter and it was held over for a meeting later with the County Prison Board.

Anonymous!

...but it changed her entire life

Despite her beauty, charm, and wealth, an aristocratic Tacoma woman found herself hopelessly out of things—avoided alike by men and women.

Then, one day, she received a letter. Anonymous! Insulting. Enclosed was a Listerine advertisement on the matter of halitosis. Across it was written "Wake up." Today there is no happier or more popular woman.

People won't tell you when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). It's too delicate a subject. They let you go on offending others—hanging yourself.

Since you, yourself, cannot tell when you have it, and since very few normal human beings escape it, why not play safe and use Listerine as a mouth wash 3 times a day? Thus you will be certain not to offend others.

Full strength Listerine ends halitosis instantly. Being an active germicide* it first attacks the germ conditions that so often cause odors and then being a powerful deodorant, destroys the odors themselves.

Lunch

Tomorrow at noontime, enjoy a nice big bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes with fruit and cool milk or cream. Prepare it in a jiffy at home. Or order it in any cafeteria or restaurant. Kellogg's are crisp and refreshing on a warm day. What's more—they actually make you cooler. They're so easy to digest, they supply nourishment without "heating" the body.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are ideal for summer lunches, suppers or breakfasts. Delicious with fruits or honey added. Children delight in their crispness and flavor. It's a splendid way to get them to take more milk.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes have that original "wonder" flavor no one has ever duplicated. Always extra crisp.

Just look for the red-and-green package. At all grocers. On diners. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Eat Freely of Fruits and Promote General Welfare

Fruits prevent acidity, stimulate the intestinal tract, and provide the elusive vitamins so necessary to health. Many fruits have similar chemical makeup.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City.

IN THE selection of foods it is necessary to keep in mind a number of things. It is not nourishment or body building alone that counts. It is equally important to know that the food will agree with the system and leave the body better off in every respect because it has been eaten.

Some foods are capable of causing acidity. This may become most distressing. The happiness and effectiveness are materially lessened if the stomach continues acid for a long time.

One of the reasons why fruits are good for us is because they prevent acidity. They are what the chemist calls "base forming" substances. That is, they produce alkalies in the body.

You may be surprised at this statement. You will ask how in the world the acid of a fruit can produce alkali, exactly the opposite of an acid.

URIC ACID FANCY

That is one of the wonders of the human body. Nature has so regulated her laboratory that it is capable of transforming the fruit acid into an alkali. You need not be afraid of the fruits just because somebody had told you "they produce uric acid," or some other dangerous acid. There is no truth in this popular fancy.

Fruits are more or less laxative in their effects; they stimulate the intestinal canal and promote the muscular contractions. Likewise, the products of the orchard possess a good deal of cellulose, the fibre of the fruit. This is not digestible, but it acts as a sort of brush to cleanse the walls of the intestine and further stimulate them to activity. In short, constipation is rarely met in fruit eaters.

The mysterious vitamins are found in the fruits. For instance, the apple carries the vitamins A, B and C.

EAT WHEN FULLY RIPE

It is wise to wait until the fruits are fully ripe before eating them freely.

The starch of the apple, for example, is converted into sugar as it ripens.

What I said about the change into alkali does not apply so strictly to the unripe fruit. The latter is capable of giving you a stomach ache, the old fashioned "colic."

Apples, oranges, peaches, pears, cherries, prunes, bananas, apricots, and all the berries are extremely valuable foods. They are very similar in their chemical makeup. Always remember that they are good for you and that eaten freely they will promote your general welfare.

Prudence Penny's Recipes

Anchovies and Sliced Egg on Lettuce.
Chicken in Batter.
Mashed Potatoes.
Baked Corn Pudding.
Tomato and Cucumber Salad.
Peach Ice Cream.

A GOOD beginning is as important in a dinner as it is in a race, and on Sunday especially, when the entire family is at home, you'll want a happy start.

So just place several anchovies and several slices of hard-cooked egg on a bit of shredded lettuce, and let your family season as it will, and you'll have as fine a start as anyone could ask.

DO I have to recommend chicken in batter, especially when it's prepared in this delicious southern way?

Make a batter of 2 eggs, 1-3 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper and enough flour to make a medium thick batter. Cut apart a young, raw chicken and roll each piece in the batter. Fry in deep fat until tender and the crust is brown.

Baked corn pudding is ever so tempting when prepared with 2 cups corn, 2 beaten eggs, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 cups milk. Beat eggs slightly; mix all together. Set dish in pan of water, bake until firm (about one-half hour) in a moderate oven. Do not overcook.

To add variety to the tomato and cucumber salad serve it with jellied mayonnaise made by soaking 1 teaspoon gelatine in 2 tablespoons cold water for 10 minutes. Then dissolve it over hot water and beat into one cup of mayonnaise.

WARM WEATHER SANDWICHES

GIVE children meals that are light and refreshing and nourishing these ultra-warm days.

An ideal luncheon consists of sandwiches and milk. Cut the bread so thin it is absolutely wafer-like. They always taste better that way. Have fruit, cheese or minced chicken fillings.

This is a delicious sandwich filling. Wash ½ cup dates, ½ cup figs and ½ cup raisins and remove the stones from the dates. Cook or steam until the fruit is soft, wash thoroughly and add the juice and grated rind of one orange. You may substitute cooked prunes for the raisins.

Remove the stems of the figs and chop them finely. Add a small quantity of water, cook in double boiler until paste is formed, then add a few drops of lemon juice. Cool and spread on thinly sliced buttered bread, sprinkle with finely chopped nuts and cover with sliced buttered bread.

IF there is chicken left from last night's dinner, fix it in this way. Make a paste of the white meat and season it with salt and pepper. Soak 1 tablespoon of gelatine in 1 tablespoon of cold water for 15 minutes, then add 6 tablespoons of thick cream. Set the dish containing this mixture in boiling water for a moment to dissolve the gelatine and beat it slowly into the chicken. Set aside to cool, smoothing it into an even mixture. When cold, spread it over bread.

This cream cheese filling is different from the thousand and one other varieties. Mix 1 cream cheese with 2 tablespoons of celery chopped fine. One tablespoon of chopped, stuffed olives, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika and enough milk to make it the right consistency to spread. Cut the bread in circles this time. Cut the centers out of half the slices. Spread the other halves with creamed butter and the sandwich filling. Place a ring of bread on the whole circle of bread. Garnish with a stuffed olive in the center.

CORN RECIPES

ALTHOUGH corn doesn't mean quite as much to modern Americans as it did to those early pioneer fathers, it is still one of the most important foods. In winter or summer it occupies a distinctive position in every pantry. So suppose today I give you a few tested recipes and see if you like them, too!

Let's start with deviled corn: Take 2 tablespoons butter or butter substitute, 2 tablespoons flour, 1½ cups milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoonful mustard, paprika, 2 cups corn pulp, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and crumbs.

Make a sauce of the fat, flour and seasonings, add corn, egg slightly beaten and Worcestershire sauce. Pour into a baking dish, cover with crumbs mixed with a little butter or butter substitute and bake until crumbs are brown.

HAVE you ever tried nourishing corn oysters made with 2 cups corn pulp, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons butter or butter substitute, and salt and pepper?

Grate the corn from the cob with a coarse grater. Beat the egg yolks and whites separately and add to the grated corn, with flour and butter, or butter substitute, salt and pepper. Drop the batter from a spoon into hot fat and fry light brown. Drain on soft paper. Serve hot.

CORN with green peppers is ever so good. Use 3 cups cooked corn, 1 tablespoon of green peppers, chopped fine, 3 tablespoons butter and 4 tablespoons cream.

Remove kernels from cob with sharp knife, put in a frying pan with butter, cream and the chopped pepper. Let simmer slowly until liquid is amost absorbed.

Corn soup is one of the most delicious and highly nutritious of the summer soups. Use one pound of the lower ribs of beef, one quart of cold water, 2 sliced fresh tomatoes, 1 cup of corn, sliced from the cob; 1 tablespoon of butter, 1 tablespoon of flour, a pinch of cayenne pepper, and salt and pepper to taste.

Put the meat and water into a soup pot and, after it has cooked a bit, skim carefully. Then add the tomatoes and corncobs. Simmer for four hours; then take out the corncobs, and add the corn cut fine, salt and pepper to suit the taste, adding the cayenne pepper, cook 15 minutes longer and then serve with slices of toast.

stead of serving macaroni, sprinkled with cheese, try a macaroni and cheese loaf.

Cook one-half cup macaroni broken into small pieces in boiling salted water until tender. Rinse in cold water. Saute one teaspoon each of chopped onion, chopped parsley and one tablespoon chopped green pepper with one tablespoon of butter until tender.

Beat three egg whites and yolks separately. Mix one cup milk, three egg yolks and one cup soft bread crumbs with the macaroni and vegetables and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Line a baking dish with buttered paper. Turn the mixture into it. Set the dish in a pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven from one-half to three-quarters of an hour.

Won't the children love a baked cheese omelet? Scald 2 cups of milk. Add 1 cup grated American cheese and stir until melted. Remove from fire, add 1 cup stale bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon butter and salt. Stir in 2 lightly beaten eggs and turn into buttered baking dish. Bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes or until the crumbs are a golden brown.

WAFFLES AS BASE—Women are discovering that in addition to the well known plain waffles and maple syrup combination of breakfast fame, waffles may be used as the base upon which to serve creamed things and that sweetened waffles served with crushed berries, sweet sauces or ice cream make substantial endings to otherwise light meals. And if you want to be very efficient, you will serve a plain waffle with perhaps creamed chicken for the first course, and equally plain waffles with ice cream or sauce for the second and last course.

SPANISH STEAK—Have one and a half pounds of round steak cut one inch thick. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour. Fry in a little fat until brown on both sides. Add one sliced onion, one green pepper and one large tomato. Continue frying until vegetables are partly cooked. Cover with boiling water and allow to simmer about two hours until tender. Thicken gravy and serve.

MILK DRINKS

A MILK DRINK is a most refreshing thing, just before retiring for the night. And numberless people have found that a glass of milk—flavored, if you like and as you like—does much to induce slumber.

I have found that hospitals make it a practice to give their child patients a milk drink just before bedtime—and I have found, too, that it works like a charm in getting those little ones to sleep.

There are children, and adults, too, who like their milk disguised under a special name and an exotic color! So for the benefit of those who insist on a little special flavor with the milk, I want to give these recipes. The very young rising generation will love them, perhaps just as a change from the usual glass of milk. And Summer time is a thirsty time, you know.

AN egg milk shake is made by beating an egg until very light; then add two teaspoons of sugar, a few grains of salt, a half teaspoon of vanilla, a few grains of nutmeg and a few grains of cinnamon.

Then fill the glass with cold, rich milk, and shake well to dissolve the sugar. This drink combines the splendid food element contained in both the egg and the milk, and makes a delightful beverage.

A Chocolate Milk Shake is always popular. Mix a cup of cocoa, a cup of sugar and a few grains of salt together; add two cups of hot water and cook for thirty minute in a double boiler.

Now you have Chocolate Paste which will do duty for a long time, if you bottle it, and put it in the ice box. Add just one tablespoon of the paste to a glass of cold milk, and shake thoroughly.

IF your fancy runs to a strawberry milk shake, that's equally easy to prepare. Cook 2 cups of strawberries and a cup of sugar together until soft. Strain, and add 2 tablespoons of syrup to 1 glass of ice cold milk.

If you don't try out this recipe soon, then I greatly fear the strawberry season will have passed you by; but you needn't be left lamenting, for canned strawberries will serve the purpose admirably. Still, I'd take advantage of the fresh-fruit season right now, if I were you, and I'd serve this most palatable drink often.

AMONG the delicacies that come to the United States every year from far-off ports is the pineapple, growing in gorgeous colors in the rich soil of Hawaii.

The pickers tap the pineapple with their finger tips, and, being experts, they know at once if the pineapple is ripe and tender and full of juice. If it is, it's ready for the consumer, and the American housewives are among the most ardent approvers and wholesale consumers of the pineapple.

Canned or fresh, it has an enviable place in the household. And because pineapple is so utterly good, we're always busy trying to think of new ways to use it. Have you ever eaten pineapple and chicken salad made like this?

One cup pineapple tidbits, 2 cups diced cooked chicken, ¾ cup celery, 1 head lettuce, 1¼ cups mayonnaise dressing and 8 cups ripe olives. Combine pineapple tidbits, chicken, celery and ⅓ cup mayonnaise dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves, garnish with ripe olives and serve with the remaining dressing.

Visit to Schenley Park Radio Feature Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

IT'S A LITTLE premature to be sure but Mary and Bob will drop in on Pittsburghers tonight for a short visit in Schenley Park. Mary and Bob are coming to see us anyway, you know, at the Pittsburgh Radio Show, but this evening's stopover will be one of those radio migrations, WJAS at 9 p. m, will give us the whole story.

There are more travelers on the air. The Jones family, of Onyx, Pa., with Mr. Blake, of Pittsburgh, are homeward bound from a trip abroad. They will go sightseeing in London, WCAE at 10:30.

Frank Mundy, who abused the king's English in a most prejudiced report of the Stribling-Sharkey fracas in Florida, some months ago, will essay the role of sports announcer for the Gillette Blades, KDKA, at 8:30. Despite this recognition and Mr. Mundy's Southern accent, we stand opposed to ever allowing him to announce another fight over the radio.

It will be remembered that Mr. Mundy told us how Stribling was pummeling Sharkey all over the ring, forgetting for the most part what Mr. Sharkey was doing to Mr. Stribling. We prepared ourselves for a Stribling verdict and were dumbfounded to learn that the judges and the referee had given the fight to Sharkey. What a nightmare!

"And oh, what a butchering he gave that football game at Pasadena. But why continue . . . we think Mr. Mundy a fine announcer, but very blind in one eye and sometimes in two.

Mayor Charles H. Kline and Arthur Taubman, vice president of the Taubman Stores, will help celebrate the opening of 10 Taubman stores in Pittsburgh, WJAS at 10 o'clock.

We Now Present

Discovering a terrible noise in the transmission of a program the other day, WJAS engineers were much mystified as to the cause. Tracing the trouble from the "mixing panel" to a microphone in Studio A, they found that a carpet-layer had accidentally driven a tack into a main wire, causing a staccato interference. The tack was removed and things went along merrily.

Frederick G. Rodgers, general program director for KDKA, KYW and WBZ, is "up in the air," flying his way to Cleveland and Detroit with Clifford Ball, manager of Bettis Field. He will remain in Cleveland for a day, then up to the Windy City for a conference with KYW officials on fall programs. It is the first time Mr. Rodgers has undertaken such a long airplane trip, his former aeronautical experience having been confined to a $5 ride over the city.

Among WCAE station mail yesterday was a letter from Mrs. Wayne Lanning, 1609 North Tenth street, St. Joseph, Mo., congratulating the station for the excellent "Pittsburgh Program" presented over the WEAF network last week. C. A. Wakeman, chief announcer at WCAE, deserves laurel for the creditable way he boosted the Steel City.

It is reliably reported that one of the smaller Pittsburgh stations recently refused an offer of $75,000 to sell. This would be about $50,000 for good will.

But other stations run up into six figures. KDKA'S investment would give any financier an awful headache. Other locals have a lot of money tied up, as witness the half-million-dollar valuation placed on WJAS just recently.

Broadcasting stations are no longer in the button business. It's big dough from now on, and the station that can't keep pace must fall by the wayside. It will be a survival of the fittest.

Tune in on the "Triadors"—Friday evenings 8 to 8:30 Eastern Daylight Time—on WJZ and associated NBC Stations.

Here's performance that surpasses all the quality claims you've listened to. Try TRIADS! Then you will admit — as thousands of others have—"This certainly is tube quality!"

Gus and Louie, the garage partners of Schradertown, have decided to try advertising for the $300 stolen out of their cash register and for the Widow Biddie's pilfered diamond ring. Accordingly, they draw the whole village to their garage with a free open-air concert. Louie and Gus announce their embarrassing losses between the band numbers led by Arthur Pryor, and Louie even says he has lost his confidence in Gus as a correspondence course master of detecting. The burly sheriff declares that if the ring isn't forthcoming at once he will search it out of Gus' hide.

The first act of the operetta closed with Franz Schubert, the composer, and Francis, a poet, in love with the two eldest daughters of Mr. Muhl, a multi-millionaire. Annette and Jeanette returned the affections of the young men and encouraged them to plead for their hands. The second act shows the wedding of Jeanette and Annette with Francis and Schubert. The latter appears to favor Annette only slightly, and the intervention of Carlina, an opera singer, causes a misunderstanding. When Schubert goes to Francis he is surprised to find Annette in his arms. Francis endeavors to explain the unexpected embrace. Schubert stops any explanation and remains alone and disconcerted.

The Jones family is gleaning fresh, and often amusing impressions of the famous city of London. Mrs. Jones is happy for the first time since she left Onyx, Pa., because she is in a foreign country where foreigners understand English. The plain American speech perplexes the Londoners, however.
Mr. Blake, of Pittsburgh, has accompanied the Jones family from Paris to London, and thanks to his thoughtful attentions, Aunt Letty is slowly but surely recovering from her infatuation for the Italian Count.

Wife Accused In Man's Death

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Aug. 16.—A charge of assault to kill is on file against Mrs. Empsey Church Riede, wife of William Riede, who died at West Wheeling two weeks ago after falling over a wall following a quarrel. The charge was made by Coroner J. W. Neal after tests made by a state chemist showed Riede had not died of poison.

CHANGE OF CLIMATE NOT ALWAYS GOOD

Need Help of World's Tonic to Overcome Bad Conditions

Change of location is not always helpful. There are many men at work in the mills and mines around this part of the country who will tell you that. Some of them came here from the fields of the old country. There they lived a normal outdoor life, and they had the ambition to better themselves. They crossed the water and got work in the great mills. Here they had to meet a complete change of habits. They worked indoors, often alongside great heat that made them sweat all the time. The air itself was different. Smoke and fog polluted it. The work took all the strength they had, and sometimes their sleep at night did not seem to restore them, so they got up in the mornings feeling sore and stiff instead of rested. Sudden changes from heat to cold led to catarrh. Catarrh spread to stomach and bowels. Constipation, bad breath, noises in the head, mucus in throat and nose in the mornings, and the failure of their food to agree with them—several or all of these bad effects followed the great change in their habits of living.

Some of them went right on suffering because they did not know where to obtain relief. Some even had to quit work. Others had a better experience. Mr. Pasquale Guzzo, who works at Arnold, Pa., tells his friends he found the remedy in that wonderful medicine known as World's Tonic. He was feeling all run down when a fellow workman recommended it. He said: "About the first result I noticed was an increased appetite. I had been troubled with constipation, and that left me. My tongue cleared up, and soon my stomach was working right. I got the benefit of the food I ate, and it made good blood. It wasn't long until that good blood and World's Tonic brought me back to good health. One by one all my bad feelings disappeared.

"Now I have found the right way to get well and keep well, and life holds out more promise of success than it has since I left the old country. I strongly advise any one who is run down by work and different way of living to get World's Tonic." For sale at Dow's, formerly McCulloch's, also May's, Mayflower, or any other first class drug store. (A-29)

Two Brothers Die In Mine Accidents

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 16.—Ruford Burke, 27, of Ronco, was killed when crushed beneath a fall of slate in the Ronco mine. He had attended funeral services for a brother, Monday. His brother has been electrocuted in a mine in Ohio.

A "BUGGY RIDE" COMMISSION

ACCORDING to Jules Beck, matchmaker for the Meyers Brothers' boxing bowl in North Braddock, that club after several weeks of experimentation, is thoroughly sold on the idea of putting on its main bouts before the semi-finals and plans to continue to do so indefinitely.

Jules Beck

When it was announced that the stunt would be tried it was said that the main purpose was to give the fans from Pittsburgh and other distant points a chance to witness the headline event and get back to their homes early enough to get a good night's sleep. If they cared to stay on for the semi-final, well and good, or they could look at a few rounds of it and then depart. Another good feature was that the plan staggered the traffic away from the bowl, eliminating much of the automobile jam in the vicinity of the arena.

IT NOW develops that the change has proved welcome in an even more important way, in that it gives night workers a chance to take in the show and get to their places of employment in time after gazing at the principal bout. Beck relates that many of the club's regular patrons work night turn in the Edgar Thomson plant in Braddock and in the Homestead Steel Works and the Westinghouse shops at East Pittsburgh. They go on duty at 11 o'clock and bring their lunch to the bowl with them and depart at about 10:30 for work. Under the old schedule the main bout seldom was in the ring before 10 o'clock and frequently much later. Going on before the semi-final, it is in the ring at approximately 9:30 and is over in plenty of time to permit these night workers to see all of it.

There really is no sound reason why the main bout should not be put on ahead of the so-called semi-final. It is done, anyway, in the case of threatening rain at outdoor shows, and who ever heard of the main act being put on last at a vaudeville show? It always occupies a spot on the bill corresponding to the semi-final at a boxing show. Then the curtain is rung down with the acrobats or bicycle wizards or roller skaters doing their stuff and the crowd walking out on them.

UNLESS they go from bad to worse, the Pirates should finish the season no lower than second or third, which is the best that was hoped for them by the fans and experts throughout the country before the campaign opened. Yet, because they were on top for a time, after getting off to a bad start, there will be keen disappointment hereabouts because they did not win the pennant, over the Cubs, who were the natural favorites even before the race got under way.

Donie Bush

Suppose the Pirates hadn't cracked and were breezing in as champions now. To whom would the credit have gone? Would Manager Bush have been hailed as a wonder manager, or would the players have received the credit? There's something to mull over when you feel in the mood to pass out brickbats for the decline of the club into the notch to which it was consigned by the pre-season dope.

SPEAKING of pennant contenders, watch those Cleveland Indians next year. They've been coming along and are going somewhere with their millionaire backing. Right now they're up in third place and rolling ahead in great style. Only recently they swept the Yankees into three straight defeats, and they have won 12 out of 17 starts against the Huggmen. Against the pennant-mad Athletics their record is five victories in 16 attempts. On Wednesday, they battled the Mackmen for 17 innings before losing, 5-3.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh is popular in Cleveland and the fans are beginning to whoop things up for him and the team. The cheering there is said to be the best organized shilling in the major leagues. Billy Evans is popular in the role of business manager and is reputed to have free rein on the club's purse strings. A young team is being built up and it looks very much as if the Ohio city will have a world series contender by the time it gets its new Municipal Stadium for baseball and other sports a year or two hence.

SOME stirring tilting is assured in the Women's National Singles tennis tournament at the Forest Hills (L. I.) Stadium next week, with Miss Helen Wills facing the prospect of having to beat Miss Betty Nuthall, of England, and Miss Helen Jacobs, No. 2 National ranking player, in order to retain the laurels she has held since 1923 with the exception of 1926, when Mrs. Molla Mallory regain the crown for a season.

Helen Wills

The seeded draw places Miss Wills at the head of the top bracket and Miss Jacobs at the top of the lower bracket. At the bottom of the upper bracket is Miss Nuthall and at the bottom of the lower bracket Mrs. Phoebe Watson, the other English star, who defeated Miss Jacobs, 6-3, 6-2, in the Wightman Cup matches last week for England's only singles victory in that competition. Miss Edith Cross, No. 3 star, is in the lower bracket with Miss Jacobs.

ORDINARILY there would be little, if any, doubt of Miss Wills' ability to successfully cope with the situation, but there is no denying the fact that since her close call against Miss Nuthall in the deciding match for the Wightman Cup, when she was extended to two 8-6 sets, fair Helen will require more than her fearsome reputation to defeat her formidable field. Miss Nuthall may be counted upon to make a great bid for victory and the same goes for Miss Jacobs if she should survive to meet the champion in the final. It is no secret that there is little love between the two Helens, who met this year in the Wimbledon final, with Miss Wills carrying off the victory.

Verily, some "battles of the century" loom in this tournament of the court queens and they should be the biggest box office attractions in their line since the duels between Mlle Lenglen and Mrs. Mallory and between Lenglen and Miss Wills.

THE newly-formed boxing commission of Illinois held its first business meeting the other day and issued a statement to the effect that it intends to enforce the law to the letter in all instances without regard to political affiliations or other influences. The board is made up of three wealthy men appointed by the governor when he fired the original commission following the ticket scandal in connection with the Sammy Mandell-Tony Canzoneri lightweight championship fight. The spokesman for the new commission is George F. Getz, who acted as co-promoter with Tex Rickard of the second Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago two years ago.

Jack Kearns

THE announced policy of the wealthy commissioners is a commendable one, but a suspicion lurks in this quarter that the idealistic trio is slated to be taken for more than one buggy ride by the astute men of the profession. Men of practical experience in the boxing game are needed to deal with the scheming minds of the higher-ups in the managerial ranks. One shudders to think of what Jack Kearns, for instance, could do to an unsuspecting and genteel commission such as Illinois' new one if he just put his mind down to it. Wrapping it around his little finger and handing it a nice empty sack to hold would be only the beginning. And there are others almost as slick as the nimble-witted Mr. Kearns, the man who made million-dollar purses through his

FRED BRAND, JR. RICHARD LONG DEFEATED

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Knox Young, Jr., Highland Country Club, is clashing with John Graham, of the South Hills Country Club, this afternoon for the Western Pennsylvania amateur golf championship as a result of victories they scored in the semi-finals of the tournament being played over the South Hills Country Club course this morning.

Graham triumphed over Richard Long, of Oakmont, 5 and 4, while Young eliminated Fred Brand, Jr., of Shannopin, 4 and 3.

Maurice LeBosquet, Highland, last year's champion, who failed to qualify for the first flight, won in the semi-finals of the second flight, defeating W. C. Farquhar Pittsburgh Field Club, 5 and 4. Denny St. Clair, Kiski, won the right to meet LeBosquet for the second division laurels by defeating Larry Seman, Uniontown, in the other semi-final match, 3 and 2.

In the third flight Lowrie defeated E. Kirkpatrick 4 and 2, while Brandon defeated Greer, 7 and 6.

Woodings and Mercer reached the final round of the fourth flight, the former defeating Jaquett, 3 and 2, while Mercer defeated Smith by the same score.

In the fifth flight Schaffer and Kirkpatrick were the finalists, Schaffer defeating Benson, 1 up, while Kuntz fell before Kirkpatrick in 19 holes.

TOMORROW—THE MAN WITH HORNS.

BUC HITTERS USE STUPID METHODS

By Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Any feverish backer of the Pirates would share the feelings of Manager Bush after yesterday's game. As well as being terribly ineffective against Eddie Brandt, the methods of the various hitters were so dull as to be stupid. For instance, nobody tried to bunt a hit as Brandt kept pumping over his balls; on the other hand, there was a tendency for the various hitters to swing clear off their stride in attempting to drive the sphere out of one of the longest parks in the league.

MANY FLY BALLS

No less than 16 of the 27 retired Pirates hit fly balls.

Granting that Brandt had a lot of stuff (in most cases of this sort the batters declare "He didn't have a thing"), there is nothing in the rules of the sport to prevent a player from trying to push a ball through the infield on a line or on the ground, somewhat after the fashion of Walter Maranville and other smart hitters.

Braves Field is noted all over the circuit as being especially hard on the long hitters. The breezes from the sea are said to get under the hard drives, keeping them in the air longer, thus affording more time for the gardeners to reach the right spot. In any event, it is the snappy line-drive hitter who cashes in here.

In the ninth inning Traynor, Comorosky and Sheely hit unusually long balls to the outfield. Each apparently was trying for a homer that would have kept the Pirates in the game, and this action seemed to be justified at the eleventh hour; yet the toehold stuff was not good strategy, as one inning after another failed to produce a tally.

DICK DOES WELL

Owing to the defeat sustained by the Pirates, the remarkable fielding of Dick Bartell did not get much of a tumble from the parties interested. Had the Pirates copped the close battle, Bartell would have been pointed out as the boy who took the game away from the Tribe. His marvelous fielding was a reminder of Hughey Critz at his best.

Regarded as a winning ball-player by most of his National League brethren, poor little Sparky Adams seems to be a marked man in the Pirate battlefront. Not so long ago, Adams was regarded as one of the best lead-off men in the league, and his fielding was good. His unfortunate throw to Traynor in the sixth inning didn't do Sparky's cause any good.

Herman Raises Hit Average To .414

Associated Press.

Babe Herman rapped Guy Bush and Fred Blake for four hits in the doubleheader at Brooklyn yesterday and lifted his already high batting average one point to a dizzy .414. His nearest rivals for Big Six honors, Jimmy Foxx and Al Simmons, were idle in a Cleveland rainstorm. Rogers Hornsby got one hit in the opener and then drew a horse collar at Ebbets Field. Babe Ruth went hitless, while Chuck Klein got just one safety in four attempts. The standing:

TOM HEENEY STOPPED BY CAMPOLO

By SID MERCER,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Vittorio Campolo, a swarthy giant from the Argentine, cut down Gene Tunney's score on Tom Heeney by two rounds last night at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, when he split the old Rock of the Antipodes asunder with a succession of sledging blows to the heart and toppled him over with a lifting right uppercut to win in nine rounds.

Although Heeney was not cut and slashed as the champion left him at the Yankee Stadium last year, he took a far worse beating from the big South American, who ground the game New Zealander down gradually with terrific rights to the body and had him wilted as early as the fifth round.

But Heeney, whose heart never was displaced by this cruel punishment, kept walking into the Goliath and firing punches that were spent before they landed. Earlier in the fight he had almost upset Campolo twice when they were exchanging rights and for a time it appeared that the giant might collapse from

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Openly disgusted with the "mush-ball" offensive of his club in the past two days, Manager Donie Bush this morning announced a startling change in his lineup and batting order.

Winning on three hits Wednesday, little note was taken of their offensive shortcomings. But when the Freebooters went through nine rounds yesterday on one real hit and one scratch, the defeat emblem rightfully perched on their once proud banner, and naturally there was a reaction on the part of the boss.

There is something wrong with a flag contender that goes through two full games on five safeties. So Bush today took the machine apart with the idea of re-assembling, he using some of the spare parts in the operation.

SHEELY, ADAMS BENCHED

Earl Sheely and Sparky Adams go to the bench in favor of George Grantham and Fred Brickell. The departure also calls Paul Waner into the infield. Brother Paul will play first base, Grantham will swing into action on second, Bartell will move to short and Fred Brickell will supplant P. Waner in rightfield.

Bush will put Grantham in the game no matter if Johnny Evers and Rabbit Maranville unload a whole Pullman full of southpaws before the battle of this afternoon begins. That was the mood of the Pittsburgh pilot after yesterday's disappointing result. And he isn't likely to rescind his move for some time.

Ervin Brame will be on the mound for the Buccos in the third game of the series. The Kentuckian is the slab nominee for the day, yet there is a chance that Brame will not be called on. Ervin has been ailing with a cold which has sinus trouble symptoms. Harry (Socks) Seibold is due to twirl for the Braves.

Lloyd Waner was the only Buccaneer in the Pittsburgh lineup yesterday who could solve the slants of Southpaw Eddie Brandt. Lloyd made one honest-to-goodness single, and he is credited with a scratch tap. Rabbit Maranville making an effort to stop Lloyd on a tantalizing grounder.

Remy Kremer, one of the principal victims of the second battle, worked a fascinating game, but a little loose play crept into the engagement, and Frenchy saw two

CHAMPS OF 1913—THEY COLLAPSED A YEAR LATER

"One More Pennant" Connie Mack finally has seen his dream come true. His Philadelphia Athletics are so far out in front of the Yankees that they have the American League flag all but clinched and he again will direct a team of champions in world series play. Above are his diamond rulers of 1913, the year before they went to pieces before the Miracle Boston Braves, after which he dismembered the outfit and began to rebuild anew, with the result that has has labored diligently but in vain until this year. McInnes, Collins, Barry and Home Run Baker made up the "million dollar" infield; Strunk, Oldring and the two Murphys roamed the outfield; Schang and Lapp were the catchers, and Combs, Bender, Plank and Bush were the star pitchers, with Orr as untility infielder.

Associated Press.

The Athletics apparently have developed the knack of advancing while standing still, but the Cubs have gone them one better by finding a way to gain ground while losing. The Mackian margin was stretched to 14 games yesterday when the Yankees lost to Detroit as the leaders sat idle in Cleveland: the Cubs won and lost in a Brooklyn double-header, but the Pirates obligingly dropped a 2-to-1 decision at Braves Field, tossing half a game into the lap of Joseph McCarthy. The Chicago lead now is eight and one-half engagements.

PITCHING DUELS

Real pitching duels were on tap yesterday at Braves Field, Navin Field and the home of the Browns. The most noteworthy mound performance was turned in at Detroit by Earl Whitehill, who limited the Yankees to two small hits to win by 3 to 0. The champions went hitless until the seventh when Bob Meusel spoiled Whitehill's afternoon by outracing Westling's throw and getting credit for a single. Roy Sherid, Whitehill's pitching opponent, got a clean blow in the next round, and that was all.

Sherid himself turned in a smart game, which is becoming something of a habit with him, but he was not prepared to meet such extraordinary work as the Detroit southpaw flashed. Harry Rice placed the game beyond Sherid's reach in the very first inning with a home run.

George Blaeholder allowed the Boston Red Sox just three hits at St. Louis yesterday to win over Jack Russell by 3 to 0, while Fred Marberry and Garland Braxton collaborated upon a four-hit performance which set the White Sox down by 9 to 4 at Chicago.

Rain kept the Athletics and the Indians indoors in Cleveland. A double-header will be played today.

ROBINS TRIPPED

Guy Bush trimmed Brooklyn by 9 to 5 in the first game of the Flatbush double-header to gain his 17th victory of the season, but Dazzy Vance evened things up by downing the Cubs 5 to 4 in the second half of the program. The end of the first game was enlivened by a shower of Flatbush confetti from spectators around third base in the ninth inning when Bressler was ruled out for being hit by a batted ball.

Rogers Hornsby collected his 26th homer in the first game, and Kiki Cuyler hit for the circuit in the second.

Ed Brandt turned back the Pirates with two hits at Braves Field to win by 2 to 1 from Remy Kremer who yielded eight blows.

STOGIES BLANK CLARKSBURG

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 16.—The Wheeling Stogies blanked Clarksburg, 9 to 0, in the feature Middle Atlantic League game played yesterday. Bridges struck out nine, walked three and gave only one hit.

Ryba added to his hurling prowess at Scottdale, when the Scots trimmed Fairmont, 5 to 2. Manager Dyer played a stellar role at the plate, getting three hits and driving in two runs.

The Johnstown Johnnies fell before the Cumberland Colts, 5 to 4, in a pitchers' duel at Cumberland. Shinn yielded 11 hits, but kept them well scattered.

The Charleroi Governors were held safe for five innings at Jeannette, but the Jays came through in the sixth frame with a four-run rally that spelled defeat, 4 to 1.

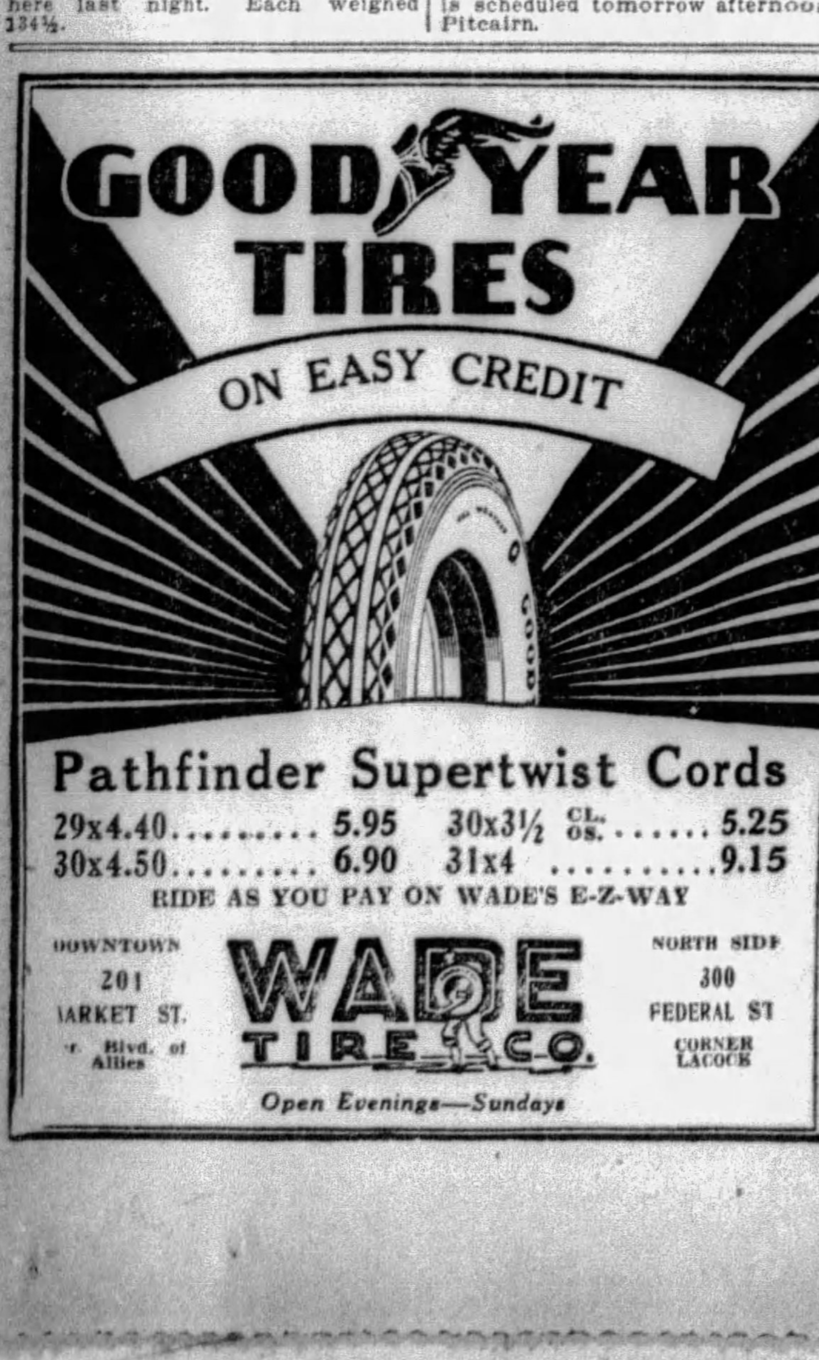
Phila. Co. Meet At Oval Tomorrow

Schenley Park tomorrow afternoon will be the camping ground of thousands of Pittsburgh athletic lovers, who will be on hand to witness the fourth annual free track and field meet, under the auspices of the Philadelphia Company and affiliated corporations.

The meet will be preceded by a modified handicap Marathon run from the Philadelphia Company building in Sixth avenue, which will finish at the Oval.

LaFAY WINS

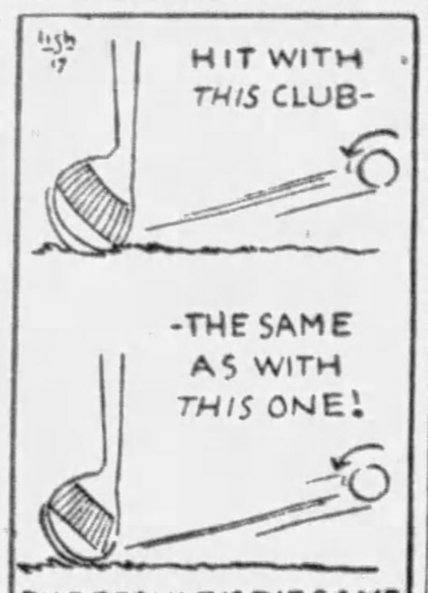
TROY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Frankie LaFay, of Troy, was awarded the decision over Mike Denton, of Los Angeles, in a 10-round bout here last night. Each weighed 134½.



BAN REMOVED

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher yesterday removed the ban on dog racing here by reinstating a temporary injunction in favor of track operators.

GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT



Should iron clubs with concave faces be used for backspin shots? Why or why not?

Answered by CYRIL WALKER,
Former National Open Champion.

I am not in favor of irons with concave faces or anything else to help put backspin on a shot. Backspin can be put on the ball with any iron club, provided the turf is taken correctly and the shot is hit firmly enough.

Concave faces, while they may help put backspin on a shot, can't do it themselves unless the shot is hit right. If you are playing a shot with a concave club, hit the ball in the manner you would hit it with any other club. If you hit the ball and turf at the same time, backspin will be assured.

TOM HEENEY STOPPED

his own exertions. The body bombardment, however, robbed Heeney's punch of its sting after the fourth round. He did manage to take advantage of Campolo's weariness to carry the seventh round.

HARD ROCK CUT DOWN

After that it was only a question of whether the courageous New Zealander could go the limit. A fierce attack of Campolo in the eighth took almost the last ounce of resistance out of the Anzac and he fell early in the ninth.

Heeney's offense had been reduced to mere gestures by the Argentinian's ripping assaults in the eighth and he backed up for the first time when Campolo bore down on him with long rights flying as they started the ninth.

Vittorio got Tom in a corner and slugged him unmercifully. When they came out, the New Zealander was unsteady on his pins. They collided once more and again Heeney was unable to protect himself against the deep thrusts of the South American.

In desperation, Tom braced himself against the ropes and attempted to trade rights. It was a pitiful exchange, with Heeney's head rocking and his barrel-like chest booming when Campolo lowered his fire.

Tom bent lower and lower as the giant stabbed him. He refused to quit, but his flesh rebelled at last. Stepping back, Campolo wound up an uppercut which caught his sinking victim under the chin and deposited him in a heap with his head resting on the lower rope.

HALTED BY REFEREE

Campolo was striding from another corner to complete the kill when Referee Jimmy Crowley, noting that Heeney was helpless and completely at his adversary's mercy, stepped between them and ordered Vittorio to his corner.

The time of the knockout was 2 minutes and 46 seconds in the ninth round. Heeney recovered quickly and in his dressing room later said that Campolo was the hardest body puncher he had ever encountered. Tom predicted that the South American would cut his way through the heavyweight field if he learns to make better use of his left hand.

COMMITTEE TO MEET

The committee in charge of the annual track and field meet of the Western Pennsylvania Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad will hold a meeting this evening to complete arrangements for the affair, which is scheduled tomorrow afternoon at Pitcairn.

MILKMEN PLAY GIMBEL NINE TONIGHT

By TOM BIRKS.

The big sandlot game this evening will be staged at Camp Horne, where the Reick-McJunkin and Gimbel nines meet in the playoff for the second half title of the Commercial and Industrial loop.

There is little doubt but that the largest crowd of the season will be on hand when the umpire calls "play ball." The Reick outfit has carried the largest number of rooters in the league this season, and, while the Gimbel nine will not lack plenty of support, Manager Stuhlfire, of the Milk boys, feels that his club again will carry a banner crowd.

The pitching selections for the game undoubtedly will be Gil Scannel and Laboon. These two men have carried the burden of the league race for their respective clubs, and they will be on the firing line when the game is called.

BURCHFIELD HOST

A. H. Burchfield, Jr., of Joseph Horne's, kindly gave the league officials the use of the Camp Horne diamond for the game, and also sent out a letter to Gimbels and Reick-McJunkin's, inviting the supporters of the teams to the camp for the game. The winner of this battle will meet the Carnegie Steel nine in the post season's playoff.

Stowe Civics have their last chance to break the monopoly of the Pleasant Valley Smilers on the City League leadership this evening when Pop Geer takes the Rox outfit to Wilson Field to meet Johnny Dunsky's team. This is going to be a real battle, and unless the Rox nine cops the game, they can be classed as also rans in the second half fight. Johnny Dunsky has not named his pitching selection, but Roscoe is expected to work for the Civics.

LEADERS CLASH

The leaders of the Steel City loop will come together this evening at Sullivan Field, when the Herron Hill Cardinals clash with the Dispatch nine. Dispatch nosed out the Cardinals earlier in the season, and Barch's club wants revenge for the defeat.

The Waverly Oil nine will have as its attraction tonight at Aspinwall the strong Reliance Life team of the City League.

PETE ZIVIC BACK AS RAY ALVIS BOXER

Pete Zivic, Lawrenceville veteran boxer, is back in the ring with both feet under the new management of Ray Alvis, of Chicago, who also handles Tony Herrera, the Mexican star, and a number of other good boxers. Negotiations were completed yesterday between Pete and Ray and the latter has got down to the job of arranging bouts for Pete, while Pete has gone into the gym to get in shape.

Pete Zivic

Pete, who is two years older than Jack Zivic, his brother, has been bothered for more than a year by a bad ear that refused to heal. He finally has overcome his trouble and feels he should be able to get back to his old form and beat a lot of the 122-pounders around the country. He has fought many of the stars, including champions.

It was 10 years ago that Pete, then 17, broke into the boxing game as an amateur. After 20 months he turned professional. He had 57 amateur bouts and has added 96 to the record as a professional. Right now he has a match pending at the New Castle Jolly Bowl with Tommy Paul, of Buffalo.

SOLMEN VS. COLOMBO

Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, and Joe Colombo, of Clarksburg, W. Va., have been matched for one of the 10-round bouts at Johnstown, August 26. Harry Taylor and Young Zabish are in another 10-rounder on the same card.

Andy DiVodi, the great foulclaimer, of New York, boxes Young Ketchel, of Chester, Pa., in the semi-final to the Mickey Walker-Leo Lomski bout at the Sesquicentennial Stadium arena in Philadelphia next Monday night. Henri DeWancker, of France, meets Johnny Farr, of Cleveland, in the second bout, and Al Fay, Charleroi heavyweight, who is a sparring partner of Walker, under the management of Jack Kearns, boxes Tony Talarico, of Aberdeen, Wash., stablemate of Lomski, in the first event. All bouts are 10-rounders.

Jack Zivic boxes Buddy McDonald, of St. Paul, at Ashland, Ky., tonight. Ruby Goldstein engages Joey Kaufman at the Coney Island Stadium. Phil Goldstein, the local lightweight, was to meet Artie DeLuca in the 10-round semi-final of this show, but called it off when he was signed to box Tommy Crawley at the Meyers Bowl next Monday night. Maxie Rosenbloom boxes Leo Williams at the Rockaway Beach arena, New York, tonight, and the veteran Italian Joe Gans meets Henny Goldberg at Canarsie, L. I. Eddie Reed, of Philadelphia, meets Jimmy Reed, of Erie, in the main bout of a show at Erie. Leo Mozdy and Frisco Grande are in the eight-round semi-final.

BILLICK FOE SOUGHT

The Meyers Bowl still is on the lookout for an opponent for Dan Billick, of Duquesne, in the eight-round semi-final to the Tommy Crawley-Phil Goldstein bout next Monday night, and expects to close for the contest today. The remainder of the card is signed. Johnny O'Keefe, of Columbus, is in with Jackie Murray, of the Hill, for another eight-rounder, and Slambang Harry Taylor, of Johnstown, meets Andy Andrucci, of Lawrenceville, in the six-round opener.

Phil Goldstein is doing his training in New York for his fourth clash with Tommy Crawley. The latter is working with a corps of sparring partners at the Pittsburgh Lyceum.

Ray Newton, of Mansfield, O., and California Joe Gans, the Negro lightweight, have been matched to box the 10-round main bout of a show in the Washington (Pa.) armory next Tuesday night. Tommy Heilman and Young Gizzy, Donora rivals, will meet in the six-round semi-final.

Teddy Welch, of McKeesport, has cancelled his 10-round bout with Gergie Peck, scheduled for Armco field, Butler, next Tuesday night, because of boils. Joe Dubranski, Welch's manager, is laid up at his home as a result of injuries suffered in a fall.

Grays Open Series With Hilldale Today

The Homestead Grays open their dash down the home stretch in the American Negro League with the Hilldale Club, of Philadelphia, at Forbes Field this evening in the first of a four-game series. The Grays and Hilldale clash at Forbes Field again tomorrow afternoon and on Sunday will play a double header at Cleveland.

Hilldale, occupants of first place, will rely on Cockrell or Strong to widen the margin between them and the Grays. The Daisies are out in front two and one-half games over the Grays, who hold third place, and by winning the series the Grays will be in a position to challenge the position of the Baltimore Blacksox, runners up.

Local Boxer, Second Given Suspensions

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Boxing Commission has announced the indefinite suspension of John O'Hara, second, of McKeesport, Pa., for conduct unbecoming a licensed second, and Monte Sirko, boxer, Pittsburgh, for unsatisfactory services at Braddock, August 12. Joseph Carelli, boxer, Pittsburgh, was reinstated.

SPORT COMMENT

shrewd handling of Jack Dempsey when the latter was heavyweight champion.

Has the so-called lively ball been taken out again in spits, or is the pitching simply of an extraordinary caliber on occasion in the big leagues? The Pirates won, 1-0, against the Braves at Boston on Wednesday, in a game in which they made only three hits off Jones and Petty permitted only five. Yesterday, they lost, 2-1, to the same Braves and were allowed only two hits by Brandt. Not a hit figured in the scoring of their solitary run either day and two southpaws limited them to a total of five hits in 18 innings! That's hardly "lively ball" hitting for a club that ranks second in club batting in the league.

York Crowd Threatens Umpire

YORK, Pa., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Nearly 4,000 fans leaped from the stands at the game between York and Binghamton of the New York-Pennsylvania League here yesterday in an attempt to attack Umpire Bill Rudolph after he had ordered Catcher Uzmann of York out of the game following a disputed decision in the first inning.

Only the quick action of the players and the timely arrival of policemen prevented the infuriated crowd from inflicting injury on the umpire.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 16.—Police were called to the local baseball park yesterday to break up a battle royal between the Birmingham Barons and New Orleans Pelicans, leading pennant contenders in the Southern Association. The fight started in the fourth inning between Anderson, Pelican catcher, and Smith, Baron second baseman, and became general when the players of both clubs rushed to the assistance of their respective mates.

UNIONTOWN'S LEGION NINE TO PROTEST

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Uniontown, Pa., will protest its game here today with Washington, D. C., the final regional game in the American Legion junior baseball championship, on the ground that a player registered with the Washingtonians is ineligible.

"The game will be played as scheduled, but we have already entered formal protest," an official of the Uniontown team said last night.

Washington has been ineligible to compete in the game thus far played, it is alleged, because Carter, a pitcher who was registered with the club, has been classed as a professional. He is not now with the team.

Carter, it is claimed, is under option to the Baltimore club in the International League. It was said last night that the option to Baltimore was signed by Carter's mother, as the youth is under age.

Yesterday Baltimore defeated Wilmington, 10 to 9; Washington beat Morgantown, W. Va., 11 to 3, and Uniontown staged an uphill fight to win the third game, defeating Baltimore, 8 to 6. The scores of the Uniontown and Morgantown games:

POLICEMEN SET FOR MEET

This evening a team of husky, athletic Pittsburgh policemen will board a Pittsburgh and Lake Erie train for Detroit, where tomorrow they will compete in the annual Police Games in that city.

Chester B. Morley, secretary of the Pittsburgh Police Pension Fund Association, will be in charge of the party, and their trainer, Tom Beggs, will also be along.

The police athletes making the trip are Frank Brush, Traffic Division; Harry Payne, No. 7 Station; Daniel Bradley, No. 6 Station; C. W. Kramer, Traffic; A. C. Mathews, Traffic; Thomas Good, Traffic.

They will compete as individuals in the hop, step and jump and the 100-yard dash, and four of them will make up a team to compete in a relay race against the Detroiters.

TECUMSEH BLUE STARS AT DOG MEETING

Tecumseh Blue made a fine showing in the hurdles event, finale on the program of the Keystone Kennel Club, at the Bridgeville Speedway last night. Tecumseh Blue came through with a race to win that matched the efforts of Fawn Chieftain and Gilt Edge, which finished in a dead heat in the second race.

Lonesome Bill outclassed a snappy field in the third race to cause an upset in the dope. Main Check was among the losers.

Graven Image copped the fourth race when he ran away from a fast field in the five-sixteenths event.

RESULTS

First race—Won by Deuces Wild; second, Hazel Pitts; third, White Checkers.
Second race—Dead heat between Fawn Chieftain and Gilt Edge; second, Patsy McGrew; third, Silver Buck.

"I FEARED EACH MEAL BEFORE I FOUND KONJOLA"

Man Who Suffered Eighteen Months From Stomach Trouble Owes New Health to New Remedy.

Many of the astounding recoveries brought about by Konjola, the new and different medicine, would challenge belief were the actual facts not known and verified. Yet it is not unusual that Konjola is such a success for it contains 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs. Each has its own duty to perform in cleansing and invigorating the system, yet they all work together in restoring new, glorious and lasting health. All who suffer and who would be well again are urged to call without delay on the Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Store, formerly McCulloch's, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where he is pointing the glorious road to health to all who suffer from the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and from rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. There is a world of hope and cheer in the amazing experience that Mr. Frank Dellane, Checara, Pa., near Pittsburgh, had with Konjola. Just a few days ago Mr. Dellane said to the Konjola Man:

MR. FRANK DELLANE

"I feared each meal before I found Konjola because my stomach was in such a disordered condition. But this new medicine brought health and happiness where suffering and misery once reigned.

"During the last 18 months I found it impossible to eat a meal without suffering dreadfully afterward. Food simply refused to digest, no matter what I ate. Shortly after meals the food fermented quantities of gas that bloated me. The indigestion pains were more than I can describe. Soon, I lost all desire for food. Gradually I grew weaker and more rundown. I became subject to dizzy spells when hundreds of spots appeared before my eyes. I was restless at night, finding it hard to sleep. Consequently I felt tired and worn-out. I was discouraged over constant failure to find relief.

"But when Konjola was recommended I felt that here was the medicine I always needed. Without hesitation I decided to give it a trial. Although I expected some relief I was hardly prepared for the wonderful surprise Konjola gave me. Just as I was told it would do, it went to the very source of my troubles. In just two weeks I felt like a different person. No one has any idea of the change that came over me. For the first time in eighteen months I am well and happy. Indigestion was swept away like magic. My appetite returned and now I eat three hearty meals a day without suffering the slightest bit. The dizzy spells vanished and my sleep became sound and refreshing. How glorious it is to have my health again. I praise Konjola to every sufferer."

And so it goes wherever Konjola is known or given a chance to prove its merits. Rightly is Konjola called the master medicine of medicines.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store, formerly McCulloch's, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine.

There is also a Konjola Man at Dow's Drug Store, Smithfield and Diamond streets—also Dow's Drug Store, 5939 Penn avenue, East Liberty.

RINEHART IN FINAL

LOCAL NETMAN MEETS ARKLE TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN,
Staff Correspondent.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Aug. 16.—Marion Rinehart, spectacular giant of Pittsburgh, and B. F. Arkle, Wheeling's white-haired boy, will clash on the gallery court of the Women's Civic Club here today in the final tussle for the Western Maryland men's singles net championship. Both luminaries breezed through yesterday in a scintillant straight-set upset frays, each edging out a rival who had registered triumph against him in an early-season encounter.

Rinehart's victim was Billy Ramsay, Uniontown and Lafayette College ace, who had trimmed the husky Stanton Heights man in the Western Pennsylvania tourney in the Steel City in June. Yesterday, however, Rinehart's mighty service, coupled with a successful net game that offset rather faulty ground strokes, carried the Pittsburgher through, 6-3, 10-8. Ramsay, evidently disconserted by the power of his opponent's delivery, found difficulty in settling into steady tennis. He was hitting over the lines quite frecuently and likewise netted oftener than was good for him. He rallied to deuce the first set at 5-all after being down, 3-1, but dropped service in game eight, whereupon Rinehart ran out the set.

RAMSAY COMES BACK

Ramsay was down at 4-2 in the second frame, but pulled up gallantly to lead at 5-4. Games then followed service to 8 all, costly errors, due in a measure to over-caution, being interspersed with many excellent shots. Rinehart spurted in the seventeenth game to push ahead at love-40 on enemy service. Ramsay fought up to deuce, but lapsed to drop the next two points and the game, at which juncture Rinehart, with colosal effort, served out—game, set and match.

Arkie attained the finale by downing, 9-7, 8-6, Sam Cohn, his conqueror in the West Virginia title found at White Sulphur. The match was a brilliant all-around affair, the contestants stroking freely, backhand and forehand, from the baseline and making numerous journeys into forecourt for placements at the net.

LOCALS ADVANCE

In the men's doubles, the Pittsburgh pair, Sawin and Rinehart, crashed into the semi-finals by trimming two Elkins teams—Jim Allen and Doran Brown and Jennings Randolph and Bob Brown—in quick order. Arkie and Selby, Wheeling duo, also pased into the penultimate frame, their victims being Flowers and Weber, of Clarksburg, 6-6, 6-4. The Clarksburgers had previously outsteaded John Brown and Sullivan, Latrobe-Pittsburgh outfit, 8-6, 6-3.

Miriam Sullivan, P. A. A. performer, upheld the Steel City honor by trimming Mrs. Graham, of Washington, D. C., to enter the women's semi-finals. With her in the bracket, upheld the Steel City honor by volleyer from Morgantown, and the capital satellites, Mariwill Wakeford and Ruth Martinez. Miss Wakeford advanced at the expense of Mrs. Winchester, Baltimore chopster, while Mrs. Martinez accounted for Dolly Harris, of Edgewood, 6-4, 6-0. The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES.

Semi-final round—M. C. Rinehart defeated W. S. Ramsay, 6-3, 10-8; B. F. Arkle defeated Sam Cohn, 9-7, 8-6.

A. A. U. Condemns Paddock Articles

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Charley Paddock, center of many an Amateur Athletic Union storm, again has drawn down upon his head the full force of official condemnation.

Answering statements made by Paddock in the current issue of Collier's Weekly, Avery Brundage president of the A. A. U., declared yesterday that Paddock, "by admitting that he has been sailing under false colors and never has been an amateur honestly," has "confirmed the suspicions" that nearly caused his disbarment from the 1928 Olympic team.

"Paddock's article is filled with inaccuracies and untruths, is sensationalism of the rankest sort, and is just what might be expected from someone whose record has been replete with efforts to cash in on his athletic prowess regardless of the rules," Brundage declared.

Baur, De Hoff Reach Tennis Semi-Final

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The singles and doubles finals in the men's division of the Northwestern Pennsylvania Tennis Association's annual tournament, in progress at the Wanango Country Club this week, will be played tonight. Byron Baur, Erie, and George DeHoff, Sharon, will be paired in one semi-final singles match, and Snodgrass, Cleveland, and Dennison, Beaver Falls, in the other. Baur is the defending champion.

Tilden to Go To England As Actor

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Bill Tilden is coming to England at the end of September to appear in a play, "They All Want Something," B. A. Meyer, producer, announced today.

"It is just possible that if he likes London sufficiently and the play is a success, Tilden will combine coaching young lawn tennis players with acting," Meyer added.

Fight Results

At Johnstown—Jackie Rodgers defeated Hughey Devine, 10 rounds; Pedlar Palmer and Panama Jimmy Brown drew, 10 rounds; Johnny Chiodo knocked out Eddie Leroy, 11 round; Mickey Duris knocked out Steve Brady, 7 round.

At Brooklyn—Vittorio Campolo knocked out (technical) Tom Heeney, 9 rounds; Angus Snyder defeated Jack Roper, 10 rounds; Paul Swiderski knocked out Eddie Melcum; Ted Sandwina knocked out (technical) Phil Mercurio, 9 rounds.

At Troy, N. Y.—Frankie LaFay defeated Mike Denton, 10 rounds; Emil Rossi knocked out Jeff Mason, 5 rounds.

At Lansing, Mich.—Jackie Nichols won on foul from Sam Lupica, 1 round.

At Des Moines, Ia.—Louie Mays defeated Ray McPeck, 10 rounds.

At Bayonne, N. J.—Leonard Zazzarino knocked out Irish Bobby Brady, 4 rounds.

At Charlotte, N. C.—Big Sid Terris knocked out Jack Webb, 5 rounds.

At Newark, N. J. — Al Delmont and Benny Levine drew, 10 rounds.

MISSES GREEF, PALFREY WIN

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Sixteen-year-old Sarah Palfrey, national girl champion, who yesterday defeated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, continued today in the Eastern grass court championships to mow down members of the nation's "first 10" stars. She won at 6-3, 6-3 from Mrs. L. A. Harper, of San Francisco, who is No. 8 in the country's rating.

Mary Greef, of Kansas City, defeated Ethel Burkhardt, of San Francisco, in the other semi-final match, 6-2, 6-2, outclassing the Californian throughout.

Miss Palfrey and Miss Greef will meet tomorrow afternoon for the title now held by Mrs. Bundy. Neither is rated in the list of the nation's first 10 best tennis stars and it will be the first time in the history of this tournament that unraked players have reached the finals. In this case both were, however, among the best eight entrants, Miss Palfrey, in No. 6 position and Miss Greef in No. 8 place. Miss Greef is 18 and Miss Palfrey is 16.

Hill and McPhail In Golfing Final

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Dr. C. M. Hill, Dallas, Tex., defending titleholder, and Donald McPhail, Baltimore, medalist in this year's tourney, yesterday advanced to the final in the Old White Sulphur golf meet.

Dr. Hill, shooting par golf, defeated Warren Elliott, Washington, D. C., 6 and 5. McPhail downed Dr. Tom Ratliffe, New York, 2 up.

Miss Olive Kahlo, White Sulphur Springs, won the title in the women's division of the tournament by vanquishing Mrs. Angus MacDonald, Charleston, former West Virginia state champion, 4 and 3.

U. S. BOAT WINS

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The American 30-square-meter yacht Tipler III, owned and sailed by S. Arthur Shuman, Jr., won yesterday's international race with the German boats for the President Hoover Cup. The American boat crossed the finish line a scant nine seconds ahead of the Gluckauf, owned and sailed by Hanns Stinnes, of Germany.

runs go over, the pair being just sufficient to trim him. The score was 2 to 1.

RAY GOES WELL

Kremer shut the door in the faces of the Braves through six fast innings, the Buccos, meantime, making one tally on a walk to Bartell, a sacrifice by L. Waner, a hit to P. Waner, a double steal, an intentional pass to Traynor, and Comorosky's sacrifice fly. All of this took place in the sixth.

Jimmy Welsh doubled over P. Waner's head with one out in the seventh, and Freddy Maguire scored Jim with a double to left. Sparky Adams made the mistake of trying to nail Maguire at third on Spohrer's grounder, and both runners were safe. Brandt walked to fill the bases, and Richbourg sent over the winning tally with a sacrifice fly.

Dick Bartell enlivened the game with 11 faultless fielding plays, four or five of which spoiled Boston base hits.

American League Sets Twin Bills

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Eight additional doubleheaders have been arranged in the American League by President E. S. Barnard. They are:

August 19, Boston at Detroit; August 24, Boston at Cleveland; August 29, Washington at New York; September 7, Detroit at New York; September 8, St. Louis at Boston; September 15, Detroit at Washington and Cleveland at New York; September 17, St. Louis at Philadelphia.

The Cleveland-Boston twin bill which was to have been played August 22, was changed at Cleveland's request.

Rodgers Wins Over Devine in 10-Rounder

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Jackie Rodgers, 122, Pittsburgh, took a 10-round decision over Hughey Devine, New York, 118, in the feature bout here last night.

Pedlar Palmer, Donora, 170, and Panama Jimmy Brown, 170, New York, fought a 10-round draw. Johnny Chiodo, Johnstown, featherweight, knocked out Eddie LeRoy, Williamsport, 59 seconds after the bell struck for the first frame of a scheduled 10-rounder.

It took Mickey Duris, Johnstown lightweight, just 57 seconds to stop Steve Brady, Pittsburgh, in the first round of their carded six-rounder.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Rush Up Industrials Strong Here

SCORE STOCKS PUSHED UP TO NEW HIGHS

Market Gives Impressive Show of Strength on News of Loan Decrease

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The stock market gave an impressive demonstration of strength today in reflection of speculative pleasure over the unexpectedly large drop in Federal Reserve brokers' loans.

Buying orders were distributed over an unusually broad list, with the result that at least two score issues were selling 4 to 10 points above yesterday's final quotations by early afternoon. Twenty or more stocks, including American Can, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Union Pacific and New Haven, were pushed into new high ground for the year.

Call money renewed unchanged at 7 per cent and money brokers expressed the opinion that it probably would not go below that level because of the 6 per cent rediscount rate. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

SEE STRONG BACKING

With no indications that any important holdings of stocks had been liquidated in last week's break, operators for the rise went ahead with their operations in the belief that powerful financial interests were still committed to the side of rising prices.

Several of Wall Street's large operators privately have expressed the opinion that business prosperity will continue at least over the year-end and that no major reaction in the stock market is likely until there has been a definite turn for the worse in the course of general business. Sharp readjustments, however, are looked for from time to time.

Case Threshing Machine, American Machine & Foundry, Westinghouse Electric, Consolidated Gas, Allied Chemical, American Can, General Electric, National Biscuit, Dupont, Detroit Edison, Western Union and Brooklyn Union Gas all sold 6 to 10 points higher, several of them touching new peak prices.

RAILS ADVANCE

Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pere Marquette and Chesapeake and Ohio, all up 4 to 8 points, were the leaders in the rail group.

American Woolen common and Foundation Company sank to new low levels for the year.

Except for the publication of several favorable earnings reports, and rumors of new stock split-ups, there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Another cut was announced in the price of Pennsylvania Crude, but this was regarded as a regional readjustment and not indicative of any general cut in prices.

N. J. STANDARD ACTIVE

Standard Oil, of New Jersey, was one of the most active features, moving up nearly 4 points to a new high at 66⅞. Buying was influenced by unconfirmed reports of a merger with the Union Oil Company, of California, and by high current earnings, particularly on the chemical by-products of the corporation. General Asphalt also moved to a new high for the year.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Buying on a big scale here, together with radically adverse threshing returns in Canada, sent wheat prices soaring early today. Estimates were also out that 1929 world wheat production might total 515,000,000 bushels less than last year. Opening ⅝c to 2⅝c higher, wheat later showed further decided gains. Corn, oats and provisions went upward also, with corn starting ⅜c to 1⅛c rise, and continuing strong.

Going hand in hand with rapid upturns in wheat values today and with a general rush here to the buying side of the market, were Winnipeg advices that harvest returns from Central Saskatchewan were in the nature of a calamity, both as to quality and yield. From another source came word that for more than 200 miles between Moosejaw and Wakaw, no poorer crop ever has been seen in 24 years, not even in the rust year of 1916, and the bad dry years of 1918 and 1919.

Tending to further hoist wheat prices today were predictions from the United States Department of Agriculture, based on the present crop outlook, that indications were for a 1929 world wheat harvest of only 3,350,000 bushels, 515,000,000 bushels less than last year. It was noted in this connection that the world obviously would consume more wheat than it has produced in the present season, and that stocks at the end of the season would be less than at the beginning.

Garlock Packing Report.

A sharp increase in net earnings was reported to stockholders of Garlock Packing Company by George L. Abbott, president of the company. For the six months to June 30, consolidated net income was $414,538 after all charges including certain non-recurring items and federal tax. Earnings were equivalent to $2.07 a share on 200,000 no par capital shares outstanding, compared with $2.87 a share on the same capitalization earned during the entire 1928 year and with $2.21 a share annual average earnings on that capitilization for the five years 1924-1928, inclusive. Sales for the 1929 period were 17 per cent ahead of those for the same 1928 period.

Wool Supply Lower.

Wool stocks held in the United States this summer are considerably below those on hand at the same period last year. The Commerce Department compilation, as of June 30, estimated this year's stock, in the grease, held by manufacturers and dealers, to be 343,637,231 pounds. Last year on the same date the figure was 385,406,572 pounds.

Florida Road Construction.

The state road department of Florida completed 152½ miles of hard-surfaced roads in the first half of 1929. Expenses for the department in the first half year totaled $885,455, compared with $1,125,959 for 1928.

AIR BRAKE AT NEW RECORD PRICE

Rise Here Follows Upturn In New York; Screw and Bolt Is Active and Higher

A flurry in Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt and a further rise in Westinghouse Air Brake marked the early dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today.

The rise in Air Brake was in response to the continued buying of the issue in New York where it was one of the strongest stocks in an unusualy strong market. Heavy buying of leading industrials in the eastern market was a direct response to the surprising decrease in brokers' loans for the week ended August 14. The general expectation was that the figures would show an increase of at least $25,000,000 and a new all time peak for total borrowings.

The decrease was interpreted as an indication that the strongest kind of buying had been in progress during the recent sensational movements in Steel, the Westinghouse issues and other prominent stocks over the past few days.

Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt was admitted to the New York Exchange this morning and its listing there caused an active demonstration in the shares on the local board. Opening fractionally higher at 27, several hundred shares were wanted and the price moved up slowly but steadily during the early trading.

Fuels were firm but there was no particular activity in that section. The miscellaneous industrials showed moderate changes from the previous closings, but volume of trading was moderate.

A new record high price was established for Copperweld Steel on the local curb today when the stock sold at 69.

Radio Net Income For June Quarter

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Radio Corporation of America earnings statement for quarter ended June 30, which is expected to be issued tomorrow, will show net income of an amount about necessary to cover dividend requirements on Class "A" and "B" preferred stocks for the period which approximates $1,400,000. This would compare with $1,401,905 reported for the corresponding quarter of 1928 and would bring net income for first six months of 1929 to slightly under $5,000,000, equal after preferred dividends to about 32 cents a share on common stock. In first half of 1928 net income totaled $4,524,779.

Continental Oil June Quarter Net

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The Continental Oil Company, of Delaware, a consolidation of the Continental Oil Company of Maine and subsidiaries and the Marland Oil Company of Delaware and subsidiaries, today reported consolidated net profit of $3,842,081 for the quarter ending June 30, before federal taxes, against net loss of $1,641,555 in the preceding quarter and a profit of $654,004 in the second quarter of 1928.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 9 points on covering and buying which appeared to be coming partly from the Southwest and Liverpool, and which was promoted by relatively steady cables and a private review of crop progress pointing to further deterioration in condition.

Trading was only moderately active and the advance met some further liquidation, combined with local selling, while there was also some trade selling of May. The offerings were quite readily absorbed, however, and the market held steady at the end of the first half hour with active months showing net advances of about 5 to 10 points.

Cable advices from Liverpool said that the market there had been influenced by covering and local buying on unfavorable crop reports from the South and the termination of the Lancashire mill stoppage.

The advance extended to 18.07c for October and 18.63c for March contracts late in the morning or 17 to 19 points net higher. There was a flurry of covering during the middle of the morning which was accompanied by some bullish comment on the statistical position, but trading generally was quiet.

At midday the market was steady and within a point or two of the best.

Utah Copper Had Profitable Quarter

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Utah Copper Company June quarter net income was $8,163,967 after depreciation, but before depletion and federal taxes, is equal to $5.02 a share on 1,624,490 capital shares versus $10,862,404 or $6.68 a share in preceding quarter and $5,435,321 or $3.34 in 1928 quarter on same share basis. Six months net income was $19,026,371 or $11.70 a share versus $9,951,541 or $6.12 a share in 1928 period.

Associated Plans Philippine Works

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Associated Gas and Electric System announced today that construction work will soon begin on its new hydro-electric development in the Philippine Islands. The water power project will have a head of 635 feet on the Bogotan River, about 50 miles from the city of Manila. The initial capacity will be 25,000 horsepower. The power to be generated will take care of the requirements of the major portion of the city of Manila and adjacent territory. It will be augmented by steam-generated power at peak loads.

Loose-Wiles May Get Pacific Firm

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—Reports reaching here from Seattle quote President Thomsen, of Pacific Coast Biscuit Company, as stating that consolidation of Pacific Coast Biscuit Company with Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, of St. Louis, has been discussed, but that negotiations thus far have involved only generalities and are in a preliminary stage.

Old-Time Standards of Value Rendered Obsolete by New Tendency Shown in Market

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Company, author of the suicide theory of bull markets, has for the present soft pedaled his warnings about intemperate speculation.

His current monthly soothsayings stress the faavorable aspects which underly the clamor for selected stocks of outstanding merit.

Col. Ayres has pointed out that the new tendency of individuals and institutions to buy common stocks for long term investments instead of bonds and mortgages has rendered obsolete the old time standards of value. Between 1900 and 1927, the market prices of dividend paying industrial common stocks averaged about 16 times current dividends, whereas during the same period the price of high grade railroad bonds was about 22 times their yield. The relationship between the two yields was that between 11 and 8.

PEAKS ABOVE NORMAL

In describing the departure from "normal" in the last two years, the economic sage of Cleveland reported:

"The stock line (showing prices as multiples of dividends) is more irregular than the bond line, but up to two years ago the long term trends of both lines were almost identical, and this made it possible to use the bond line as a normal line for the stocks. Since the stock line rose above the bond line in times of bull markets, and fell below it during bear markets, it became possible to consider the bond line as a normal line, and to compute how far above or below that normal the stock prices were each month.

"During the bull market, the peaks of prices were reached at levels from 10 to 20 per cent above normal, while in the bear markets the lowest prices were reached at about similar percentages below normal.

"Since 1927, these time tested standards have gone into the discard. By the end of 1928 stock prices had risen to 55 per cent above normal, and so far in 1929 they have continued on up until they are now about 76 per cent above normal. They have been below normal since 1924. This is truly a new era in which formerly well established standards of value for securities no longer retain their old signifance.

INVESTORS BUY STOCKS

"The generally vigorous and persistent advance in the earnings of leading industrial corporations during the last five years probably constitutes the most important single cause behind the unprecendented advance in stock prices. Investors are buying stocks, instead of bonds and mortgages, because they realize that, if corporate earnings continue to advance the yields will eventually become adequate, and by that time they will have in addition important increases in capital. Meanwhile they are in the main sufficiently free from economic pressure so that they can afford to wait. This type of support by investors creates almost ideal opportunities for speculators, and so the new conditions have destroyed the old standards."

In alluding to the new double-edged policy of the Federal Reserve, the Cleveland banker says:

"Despite the rate increase it does not seem probable that money rates will be so high as to have much restraining effect on business, or to overcome in the security markets the stimulating effect of large earnings."

OFFICES ON LINERS

The announcement of the opening of branch brokerage offices on de luxe express trans-Atlantic steamers is more than a publicity gesture. It is a symbol of the new tendency of men of affairs to draw away from their desks and to seek recreation. Modern invention makes it increasingly feasible for busy men to travel vast distances from their offices without losing touch. Men with large commitments in the security markets now find it feasible to get instantaneous reports on prices in foreign countries and on the high seas. The practical advantages of the new facilities are difficult to exaggerate, but like all tokens of progress they exact a price. In this case, the price is that it becomes increasingly difficult during recreational periods to forget the chatter of the workaday world. Alert brokers, doubtless, will follow up the stalls on big steamers with branch offices on crack railroad trains, such as the Twentieth Century and the Broadway Limited. Wall Street is a psychological conception rather than a geographical area, and the telephone, telegraph, radio and cable are tending to make Wall Street worldwide.

Senator Carter Glass, who loathes speculation, wants to pass a law to place a punitive tax on operators who hold stocks only for short periods, but his proposal is out of tune with a worldwide trend to speed up. In this financial jazz age, investment habits are fast changing, as the public is becoming to an increasing extent speculatively inclined. For example, the appeal of most investment trusts is not that they compete with savings banks in assuring safety of principal, but rather that they offer an alternative for individual trading accounts as an avenue for attaining capital appreciation.

SOUTH PENN OIL TO CUT MELON

A net income of $2,842,767.49, to be paid as dividends on common stock was reported here this afternoon by the South Penn Oil Company.

This income, for the first six months of 1929, is sufficient to pay the regular yearly dividend, officials of the the company said, or an increase of nearly a 100 per cent, should earnings continue at that rate for the full 12 months period.

The South Penn has no preferred stock, no bond issues, a value of 1,200,000 shares of common stock, of $25 par value, or a capitalization of $30,000,000.

Dividends were not declared, company officials explained, but the net income was available for that purpose at any time.

Pennsylvania Crude Oil Prices Reduced

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—South Penn Oil Company has reduced all grades of Pennsylvania crude oil 25 cents a barrel except that in Buckeye lines, which has been reduced 30 cents a barrel.

Railway's Yearly Net Proves Lower

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Market Street Railways, of San Francisco, reports for 12 months to July 31 net earnings $1,404,172 before retirement versus $1,521,287 in previous year.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Stocks moved forward with vigor on the Curb exchange today in response to the $68,000,000 drop in brokers' loans and 7 per cent call money rates. New highs were reached by issues in practically all groups, with gains in the active leaders ranging up to 10 points.

A bullish factor was the United States government report of the highest merchandise exports and imports since 1920. Gold imports totaled $35,524,000 in July against $803,000 exports.

Electric Bond and Share took a firm hold on the leadership of the market and shot up more than 8 points to a record high price for all time above 150. Fractionally all of the other recent leaders in the utility group were strong, with gains of more than 1 to 9 points being made by Electric Investor, American Superpower, Allied Power, Central States Electric and United Gas Improvement. Middle West Utilities new was inclined to heaviness.

The oils as a group were strong, reflecting advances in "big board" petroleum shares and in anticipation of crude production being substantial curtailed by the new California law. This legislation goes into effect the end of this month. Gulf got up above 197 on a rise of 7 points. Humble, Cosden and Ohio stepped higher.

Transamerica, the Gianinni holding company, broke through to a new high above 144. Pennroad made a small gain, while Haygart, controlled by the Hayden Stone interests, moved up more than 2. Prudential Investors sold at a new high. Union American Investors lifted its high to 85.

The mining stocks worked irregularly higher, with New Jersey Zinc and Noranda gaining more than a point. Newmont encountered selling pressure.

The air stocks were quiet and held around yesterday's closing levels. Checker Cab was inclined to sell off, while Ford Limited held firm. Crocker Wheeler again established a new high. American Cyanamid B gained ground. Gleanor Combine advanced smartly in expectation of an early improvement in the farmers buying power.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Special meeting of Allis Chalmers stockholders has been called for September 20 to vote on increasing the authorized number of shares from 500,000 to 2,000,000. There will be issued four shares of new stock for each one outstanding.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The raw sugar market was firm and 1-32c higher today with sales of 10,000 bags of Porto Rican due early in September at 3.83c delivered.

Price changes in raw futures were narrow and irregular, with trading less active and mostly in the way of evening-up for over the week-end adjournment. The market opened 1 point higher to 1 point lower with some covering and commission house buying, but the demand was soon supplied and prices reacted later under liquidation and selling by houses with Cuban connections. The reaction carried prices 1 to 2 points below the previous close, but offerings were absorbed on this setback by trade interest and the market firmed up again in the late forenoon with the list at midday 1 point higher to 1 point lower.

The refined market was quiet with refiners quoting at 5.50c for fine granulated, but second hands available at from 5.20 to 5.30c.

Sharp Stock Decline Shown in Tobacco

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Stocks of leaf tobacco held in the United States by dealers and manufacturers on July 1, 1929, were 1,686,314,000 pounds, against 1,949,002,000 pounds on April 1, 1929, as reported to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

ECONOMY HELPS MANHATTAN ELECTRIC

Strengthening of Finances And Increase in Sales Forms Brighter Outlook

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Manhattan Electrical Supply Company has reached a turning point in its operations so that it appears reasonably certain that profits will be realized henceforth as the result of economies introduced in production methods and internal reorganization of subsidiaries.

Although the company operated at a deficit in the first quarter this year, improvement in the final part of the second quarter was sufficient to offset this and permit a profit of $67,034 after all charges, but before Federal taxes, for the six months. This made a fair comparison with the same period in 1928 when $71,899 was reported.

For July, alone, profits were in excess of the total for the six months' period. All divisions are functioning on a satisfactory basis currently with Troy Laundry Machinery registering the best gains. This branch manufactures heavy equipment for hotels, laundries, etc. New lines have also been introduced by Manhattan and these, too, should benefit operations.

STRENGTHENS POSITION

From the standpoint of finances the company has also progressed, having written off deferred charges and being out of the banks. Current ratio at the end of June, last, was about 5½ to 1, practically unchanged from six months earlier. The strengthening of its financial status over the past year has arrived at a point where further write-offs will be unnecessary so that earnings in the future will not suffer on this score.

Since the sale of its battery business in 1926, the company has been going through a difficult period involving reorganizations in subsidiary operations and bulwarking of its financial structure. Profits, consequently, have been irregular, with deficits occasionally reported.

Results of operations in 1928, for example, after writing off extraordinary losses, showed a deficit of $742,305, which, compared with a profit of $642,716, after all charges, including taxes, in 1927. The loss suffered in 1928 converted earned surplus into a deficit of $317,745 and reduced capital surplus to $369,199.

SALES IN FIRST HALF

Sales in the first half this year were on record basis, totaling $4,813,560, an increase of $819,000 over the similar six months of 1928, or 20 per cent. On a full year's basis, amounting to $9,669,770, and comparing with $9,245,676 in the previous year.

Following adverse operating results in the early months of last year, the company decided to omit dividend payments in September, previous to which time $5 annually had been paid. An analysis of income statements from 1925 showed that the company had not been earning the dividend from operations, the continuance of its payment being dependent upon income from sources other than operations, such as the sale of assets.

As at present comprised, Manhattan has five subsidiaries, the most recent, United States Manganese Corporation, being acquired at the end of 1927. The others are Troy Laundry Machine Company, Trout Mining Company, Halliwell-Shelton Electric Corporation, and E. D. Anderson, Inc.

RAIL TAX BILLS MORE THAN FOR FUEL

Railway Age Demonstrates That Levies Best Fuel Costs by $50,000,000

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Railway Age calls attention to the fact that the railways have so reduced their fuel bill, and the federal, state and local governments have so increased railway taxes, that the railways are now paying at the rate of $50,000,000 a year more in taxes than they are paying for all the fuel used to furnish power for their freight and passenger trains.

In 1920 the fuel bill of the railways was $400,000,000 more than their tax bill. In every year in history previous to 1928 the fuel bill was the largest item of railway expenses, except labor. Last year, however, taxes exceeded the fuel bill by $35,000,000; and in the first five months of this year, while the fuel bill was reduced about $6,500,000, the tax bill was increased almost $11,000,000.

"The purchase and use of railway fuel are under the control of private management, and the railway fuel bill constantly declines," says the Railway Age. "The taxes the railways must pay are determined by government authorities, and their taxes constantly increase. The economies the railways have been effecting in the use of fuel have been but a part of the economies they have been making in almost all branches of their business, as a result of which their total operating expenses were 22 per cent less in 1928 than when they reached their peak in 1920. Meantime, their taxes increased 43 per cent.

FIGURES FOR 1916

"In 1916 the Class I roads spent $250,785,000 in taxes, or 7 per cent of their total earnings, and $119,785,000 in taxes, or 4.4 per cent of total earnings. Their fuel bill was enormously increased during the war by increases in the price of coal and congestions of traffic which made economical operation impossible and in 1920 reached the record figure of $675,000,000, or 10.9 per cent of total earnings.

"As soon as business conditions began to become normal the railways commenced a nation-wide campaign to effect savings in fuel. They improved their methods of educating and supervising employes who handle fuel. They put their locomotives in better condition, and acquired thousands of new locomotives equipped with modern appliances which cause less fuel to be consumed in proportion to the power produced.

Between 1920 and 1928 the total amount of fuel used in freight service was reduced 30,000,000 tons and in passenger service 7,000,000 tons. On the basis of the average price paid in 1928 this represented a saving of $92,000,000 annually. The total reduction in the fuel bill, due both to the decline in the price of fuel and the improvements effected in its utilization, was from $675,000,000 in 1920 to $354,200,0000 in 1928, or 47 per cent. The fuel bill was 10.9 per cent of total earnings in 1920, and only 5.8 per cent in 1928.

HOW TAXES INCREASED

"The increase in taxes between 1916 and 1920 was relatively about as large as in the fuel bill. Taxes in 1916 were about $120,000,000 and in 1920 were $272,000,000. After 1920 all resemblance between the trends of fuel costs and taxes ceased. Taxes continued rapidly to increase. In 1920 they were $400,000,000 less than the fuel bill. In 1928 they were $389,432,000, or $35,000,000 more than the fuel bill. In the first five months of 1920 they were $20,000,000 more than the fuel bill and at that rate should exceed it in the entire year by $50,000,000. The tax bill in 1928 was 6.4 per cent of total earnings, as compared with 4.4 per cent in 1920.

"In almost all our industries private management is increasing efficiency and economy in the use of fuel and in almost every other way, while increases in taxes are absorbing large parts of the savings made. This is one of the principal causes of almost every important economic problem with which the nation is confronted. Doctor Whitney Coombs, economist of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics said in a recent address: 'Farm taxes have increased nearly 160 per cent in the last 15 years, whereas land values are now about 20 per cent higher than in 1913.' Increased taxes are one of the principal causes of the farm problem, but who is doing anything about them?"

Changes Sought by N. Y. Reserve Indicated by Bill's Statement

THE first indication of the working out of the changes made by the New York Federal Reserve Bank last week in raising its rediscount rate, and at the same time offering to buy bankers' bills bearing a reduced discount rate is afforded by the statement of the bank for the week ended on Wednesday. In a broad way the plan operated during the week to increase the amount of reserve funds in the bill market by approximately $36,000,000, or about as predicted. At the same time, however, the net effect of this easing of the credit situation was entirely eliminated by a reduction of $99,493,000 in bills discounted by the New York bank, and the amount of reserve credit in the local market consequently shrank more than $66,000,000. This large reduction of discounts at the local bank by the activity of the member banks of this district in reducing their borrowings from the reserve by the substantial figure of $194,000,000. This in turn was accomplished by member banks reducing their loans on securities by $139,000,000. Part of the easing effect resulting from the buying of bankers' bills for the New York Reserve Bank was offset by a reduction of $20,000,000 in the amount of bills held for foreign account, so that the net gain to the bill market was only about $18,000,000.

Changes in the amount of Federal Reserve credit outstanding in the week ended August 14 so offset one another that the net result for the whole system produced a difference of only $602,000, a decline from the previous week. Although the New York Reserve Bank decreased its total bills and securities by more than $66,000,000, increases in similar holdings by the other banks very nearly counteracted the decrease here. This net balancing of the outstanding credit of the whole reserve system was due mainly to that while the system increased its holdings of bankers' acceptances bought in the open market by nearly $39,000,000, the amount of bills discounted was reduced by more than $36,000,000. The net effect indicates that the Reserve system, though buying some bankers' bills to aid the acceptance market, is not easing the whole credit situation.

REVIVAL of reports of extension of a huge credit by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to the Bank of England evoked a general denial in responsible quarters today. The only part of the latest suggestion that was entirely new was the mention of the sum involved, namely, $250,000,000, although it was admitted the Bank of England doubtless could obtain a credit of this size in this country, evidence was lacking that arrangements had been made for establishment of the credit, and it was not even certain that such a proposal even had been discussed by the authorities in control of the central banks. Bankers were inclined to doubt the implication that plans had been completed for the program.

Bright pictures of the future facing Glidden Company are being painted by middle western interests concerned with the market movements of the stock. They point out that company is breaking all records in its paint and varnish divisions. In addition to this expansion in the food products line has been rapid and all plants are operating at capacity. It isestimated that sales this year will total $42,000,000 against $27,417,571 last year.

SELLING on the news that Radio Corporation had lost two patent suits was deemed to be of poor quality in some quarters. In any event officials of the corporation have laid emphasis on the fact that the decision will be appealed. The long awaited "poor semi-annual report" will soon be released for publication and with this out of the way a sharp advance is predicted by those who have advised the purchase of the stock below 83.

Investment trusts continue to accumulate International Telephone & Telegraph for the long pull, thus further reducing the floating supply. The company is one of the largest communication organizations in the world and the outlook for its future growth is favorably comparable with that of American Telephone & Telegraph.

JULY EXPORTS AT RECORD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Exports of merchandise from the United States during July were highest for any July since 1920, when total was $651,100,000, Department of Commerce officials stated. Previous high July imports were in 1920, when total was $537,100,000. Not since July, 1920, has the seven-months' total exceeded the total for this year's seven months.

Officials stated the high export total for July this year was due largely to increased shipments of automotive products and machinery, sugar, coffee, rubber and hides imported into the United States during July, helped to swell the total to a new high.

July gold exoprts were $803,000 against $79,190,000 in July, 1928, and for the seven months, $7,853,000 against $529,708,000. July gold imports were $35,524,000 against $10,231,000 in July, 1928, and for the seven months, $217,031,000 against $93,307,000 in 1928 period.

July silver exports were $6,784,000 against $6,160,000 in July, 1928, and for the seven months, $47,140,000 against $48,491,000 in 1928 period. July silver imports were $4,723,000 against $6,544,000 in July, 1928, and for the seven months, $37,458,000 against $37,997,000 in 1928 period.

PETTING PATTY — No Bargain Hunter — By Macharner

Screw and Bolt Listed On 'Big Board'

EARNINGS of $1.11 a share reported by Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt for the first half of the current year was regarded as a satisfactory showing by traders in touch withe company's affairs. The stock was admitted to trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Net income was $1,668,476 for the six months, indicating net of $294,139 for the month of June as against approximately $275,000 for May. The company had previously reported income of $1,374,337 for the five months to May 31.

July earnings will probably show a substantial increase over those of June and with prospects of maintaining the higher ratio over the balance of the year it is considered likely the company will double its annual dividend requirement of $1.50 a share on the 1,500,000 shares of no-par capital stock. There is no preferred stock, and funded debt as of May 31 was $3,933,000, the outstanding 5½ per cent bonds having been reduced to that amount from $4,018,000 since January 1. Should earnings continue at the rate disclosed so far in 1929 it is considered probable the company will declare an extra dividend at the end of the year.

Operations Higher.

SCREW & BOLT'S operating ratio is probably above the 70 per cent reported a few weeks ago. A 20-carload order was shipped to a New England utility project only a few days ago and the company has large orders on its books for track supplies. Business from the automobile consumers is expected to expand over the fall, as the various automobile company customers get a better line on the market for their new models. In addition to effecting substantial operating economies, the company has expanded its variety of products over the past year or so.

One of the most important developments was the acquisition of patent rights on the "Dick" propeller for airplanes and for the manufacture of hubs for flying machines. Early in the year reports were circulated the company would go into heavy production of the new propeller, but these statements were exaggerated. More recently it became known that the company intended to turn out only a comparatively few of the blades. It is not known when volume production will begin but it is generally understood that propeller business is not expected to contribute anything to the 1929 earnings.

Navy Tests Propeller.

PRODUCTION of the blades may be stepped up before the end of the year, however. The United States Navy has been conducting exhaustive tests of the blade and one of the latest tests, made last week, is said to have been highly pleasing to all concerned. The "Dick" propeller is a hollow steel blade, having many advantages, its backers claim, over the moulded aluminum and steel alloy propellers in general use.

The principal feature of the propeller is the passing of the engine exhaust through the hollow blade and keeping the metal at a temperature which prevents accumulation of ice in the higher altitudes. Also, it is asserted, the blade is capable of standing up under a higher revolution per minute than is customary with the equipment in general use up to the present. Another advantage its friends claim is that there is less chance of defects in the metal of the hollow, rolled steel propeller than in the moulded, solid blades. Further tests, they say, and actual operation will bear out their contentions on these points.

Block of Stock Absorbed.

IN VIEW of all these favorable factors in regard to the company, the trading fraternity has been somewhat at loss to account for the failure of the stock to reflect the situation. One answer is that a rather large block of the stock has been hanging over the market for some time and the liquidation of these holdings has accounted for its inability to break out of the relatively narrow trading range in which it has been working for several weeks.

According to reports in Fourth avenue this week, the greater part of this stock has been sold and the market has taken it with no unusual recession in the price. One rumor in the street is that Jones & Laughiln interests have accumulated several thousand shares. Since a pool operation forced the price to around 30 last spring, the stock sagged off steadily until it reached a level around 25 where it appeared to have reached rock bottom. Subsequent movement has been in the upward direction and with the admission of the shares to the New York exchange, bulls on the issue are confident that the previous levels will be reached shortly and new highs established before the year is out.

SHEET AND TUBE CUTS MELON

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 16.—Stockholders of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company at a special meeting Thursday morning approved an increase in the number of authorized common shares to 2,000,000 from 1,000,000. Of the increased shares 200,000 will be required for payment of a 20 per cent common stock dividend. Directors declared for third quarter the regular cash dividends of $1.25 on common stock and $1.37½ on preferred.

President James A. Campbell advises that the company has enjoyed a very satisfactory year to date, with favorable outlook for the remaining months.

Investment Firm's Earnings Increase

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Associates Investment Company reports net after all charges for seven months ended July 31 of $504,563, equal after preferred dividends to $5.64 a share on 80,000 shares of common stock as compared with net of $284,585, or $3.79 a share on 61,000 shares of common stock in the corresponding period of 1928.

NEW CLAIRTON BANK OPENED

Clairton's new $300,000 banking home for the Union Trust Company has been opened to the public. The building is located at the corner of Miller avenue and St. Clair avenue.

The bank was constructed of Indiana limestone and granite bulkheads and with its high Colonial windows, indirect lighting and pale blue Italian marble interior presents a striking appearance. The bank recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in Clairton. J. Will Taylor is president. The opening was marked with public and private receptions.

Aero Supply Firm's New Business Up

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—New business received by Aero Supply Manufacturing Company, in July totaled, $89,944, an increase of 80 per cent over June and 46 per cent over the average of the first six months.

The company is building an addition to its plant at College Point, N. Y., which will increase capacity by 25 per cent.

COTTON STRIKE SETTLED

MANCHESTER, England, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Terms of arbitration of the dispute in the Lancashire cotton industry have been agreed upon at a conference between representatives of the employers and operatives with Sir Horace Wilson permanent secretary of the Ministry of Labor, in the role of conciliator. Full liberty of action was given individual mills to reopen for work on Monday.

While the wage dispute which brought about the great stoppage two weeks ago last Monday still remains to be settled, it appears that work at the old standard of wages will be resumed.

The dispute arose when the manufacturers declared a wage reduction of about 12½ per cent was necessary for them to meet foreign competition, especially in Asia.

As the result of the personal intervention of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and the Labor Ministry, the employers recently agreed on the principle of arbitration, to which they had previously been opposed, providing an agreement on its method of application could be agreed upon with the workers.

NO LOAN MADE TO ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—There is absolutely no foundation for report that a fund of $250,000,000 is on hand or will be made available for loans to the bank of England, Governor Young of Federal reserve board declared following conclusion of reserve board meeting here.

He said that regularly twice a week he is forced to deny that any loan is contemplated to the bank of England and that such denial also has been made by secretary of treasury.

Gov. Harrison of New York Federal Reserve bank would not comment upon the story that such a loan was to be made.

Gov. Young further said that bill rates were not discussed at meeting of board and no announcement was made of any change in the New York Federal Reserve re-discount rate.

Southern Pacific To Test New Air Brakes

It is understood Southern Pacific Company is interested in equipping several hundred freight cars with the new brake of Westinghouse Air Brake Company.

Those familiar with this development point out that there have been few major improvements in railway braking equipment despite the heavier demands brought about by heavier trains and equipment. The new brake designed to meet this need is therefore expected to result in a large increase in Westinghouse business.

Approval by the American Railway Association is expected in the next 30 days.

Cutten Advising 'Sit Tight' Policy

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Arthur W. Cutten feels there is no cause for alarm at this time and that the best policy is to "sit tight and not rock the boat. There is no money to be made in taking small profits," he says.

His commitments in Baldwin, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Simmons and many others have been based on intrinsic value of the issues and their long-pull prospects, he declares.

BUGS BAER Says

PARITY BY PARLEY

THIS day's lesson will be in international optical illusions.

The slogan is parity-by-parley.

"Buga" Baer

Which means talk until all nations are even.

Even worse than they were.

We don't exactly get this parity-by-parley business.

It sounds too much like cloture with adenoids.

Peace with talk is pretty much like cotton with weevils.

We do not know what parity means.

Come to think of it—we do not know what peace means.

Those assembled peace diplomats have been finally tagged and classified like butterflies which have stuffed themselves and varnished their own wings.

They are salesmen who forgot to bring along their samples.

Does parity-by-parley mean hearts and flowers? Or Russians chasing Chinese?

Does it mean the tinkle of contented cow-bells at twilight or Riffs slugging tourists?

Does it mean that the American Navy shall be the world's most formidable junk-heap?

Does it mean that every time Europe builds a battlescow, we sink one to keep the balance of power fluttering like the temperature of a malarial patient?

Parity-by-parley is a beautiful phrase. It is the open sesame to the entente cordiale, which has no intent and is not cordial.

It is the password which gets you by all the gates and lands you in the backyard of paradise.

It is the protecting sand in which national ostriches bury their heads while the boys with the guns shoot off their colonial tail feather.

Parity-by-parley is the Siamese twins of catchwords.

Slogans were made to sell patent medicines and suburban real estate. They are not much good for channel swimming, asthma or sinking navies.

Our diplomats have yet to win their first European spelling bee. Why not declare a moratorium on travelogues before we are forced to make our American flags out of linoleum or some other waterproof material which will look nice when it sinks?

Charter Ballot Banned; Decision to Be Appealed

In an opinion written by Judge James R. Macfarlane, concurred in by Judges Joseph M. Sweringen and Harry H. Rowand, the county commissioners are directed not to place the charter for a Consolidated City of Pittsburgh, defeated at a special election voted in June, on the November election ballot for another referendum. It is held that although the state constitution states the charter may be submitted again if defeated, enabling legislation is necessary.

The decision will be appealed to the Supreme Court, meeting here next month. If the lower court is reversed the charter will come up for vote again in November. Friends of the charter will hope for reversal, of course, and are planning for a more extensive campaign of education, should the way be cleared for another test at the polls.

Big Road Improvement Stimulant to Business

The state and county have agreed to unite in assuming the cost of a plan to eliminate the dreaded Turtle Creek hill from the Lincoln highway by constructing a cut-off from a point in Ardmore boulevard, west of Turtle Creek, to join the present highway at East McKeesport. The improvement is to include a bridge 1,500 feet long and 200 feet high, the total cost of the new roadway and bridge to be $3,500,000. The county will have charge of the construction of the bridge, which will require two years to complete.

Eventually this will mean greatly improved traffic conditions for travelers to and from the East, and, in the meantime, the gradual expenditure of such a large amount of money will prove to be a welcome stimulus to labor and industry.

Borrowing Means Sorrowing

But France Does Fairly Well.

The French feel sad about their debt to the United States. It is easy to borrow in war time, painful to pay when peace comes, although, as President Hoover says, Uncle Sam has forgiven 61 per cent of the French debt.

The British feel still sadder, for they lent billions to France and Italy. And now British gold is being shipped to France in constantly increasing quantities.

France, by the way, is the only country in Europe able to lend freely to other countries.

Very efficient, the French. It costs them 4 per cent to borrow money when they want to buy stocks. It costs Americans from 8 to 20 per cent.

For one thing, France is not blessed with a Federal Reserve Board that may or may not be controlled by gentlemen more interested in bank stocks than they are in general prosperity.

President Hoover or somebody in Congress ought to look into the question of the Federal Reserve and any possible interest that those controlling it may have in bank stocks. No one questions the Federal Reserve's good faith, but someone might be influenced unconsciously.

It is hard on citizens to pay 20 per cent for call money. It is very pleasant for the banks that get money from the Federal Reserve for 5 per cent and lend it to customers for 10, 15 and 20 per cent.

The New Calendar

And a Doctor's Advice.

The new calendar, changing the year into 13 months of 28 days each, with Friday coming on the thirteenth of every month, would be a great improvement.

Those who object to Friday the thirteenth coming 13 times a year should remember that America was discovered on a Friday, the Pilgrims landed on a Friday, there were 13 original American colonies, 13 stripes in our flag, 13 feathers in the tail of the American eagle.

But these interesting facts won't cure the superstition that goes back thousands of years before the American flag began waving.

A learned gentleman tells you that getting out of bed when the alarm rings, getting into cold water, then doing a daily dozen, by radio, is nonsense and even harmful.

The alarm clock is a dangerous nervous shock, says the professor. Thousands will say "Amen." Cold water is another dangerous shock. Early morning, before your body and nerves are really awake, is not the time for exercise.

In addition, no exercise can take the place of a real game. It stimulates the mind and that makes the exercise normal.

A little country boy rushing out of school yelling "Pitcher, Inner, Ticker" as he calls out his place in the ball game benefits from the exercise, not the old gentleman bending over and touching the floor 12 times.

Out Go Billions

It's Easy to Spend.

In the days of Tom Reed people shuddered at the "billion-dollar Congress." How could the most reckless congressional spendthrifts squander one billion dollars in two short years?

If those old Republican spenders came back they would be "amazed at their own moderation."

The Seventieth Congress spent more than nine billion dollars. In the fiscal year 1918-1919 the country spent $27,000,000,000. Practice makes perfect.

6—Town Hall, seating at least 15,000.
7—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
8—Development of river transportation.

Why Can't He be Comfortable? -:- Drawn By Nelson Harding

Bible Passages

Be Ye Reconciled to God

(II Corinthians 5; 14-21)

FOR the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

To wit, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

Wind and Sun

THE wind and the sun, they are friends of mine.
The sun's warm kiss and the wind's sweet wine,
And never a friend was more kind than they
With their power of charming my cares away;
All of joy life seems spun
In the kiss of the sun.

The wind and the sun, they are good, so good;
Whatever the weight of a cruel mood,
Still the wine of the wind and the sun's sweet kiss
Can banish my sorrow and bring me bliss;
Troubles fall behind
At the song of the wind.

The wind and the sun, they are tried, true friends,
And their touch for life's trials can make amends;
They whisper and smile and, where all seemed blight,
The world grows friendly and fair and bright,
Peace like heaven's is won
In the wind and the sun.

THE BUTTER AND EGG MAN

By Herbert Kaufman

ALL the great retailers started as SMALL storekeepers, or began their mercantile careers with ladder-bottom jobs.

Wanamaker's, Gimbels, Marshall Fields, Saks, the Woolworth and Penny chains are alike graduates of jerkwater "emporiums," peddlers' packs or salary savings.

An immigrant lad built the great May organization.

Harry Selfridge, once an errand boy on State street, is London's merchant prince.

The foundations of half the establishments on Fifth avenue and Michigan boulevard were laid in obscure back streets. And many ANOTHER millionaire is in the making at the Bronx end of Broadway.

LET'S meet one of them now and watch his pin feathers as they sprout.

He's a butter and egg dealer in the Fort Washington section.

His tiny shop, smaller than a hotel room, opens at seven and closes at midnight. So he crowds two days' SELLING into one day's OVERHEAD.

He handles a thousand dollars' worth of eggs a week. There are no regular discounts in the egg trade, but he gets one per cent or, for cash on delivery—which puts $520 a year in his pockets and goes to show how fast MICKLES grow to MUCKLES.

EVERY afternoon he scours the wholesale districts, where spot payment is a perpetual card of admission, and always manages to find some odd lot on the bargain block to use as a window teaser.

Today his fishing lines may be baited with a fine old Stilton cheese; tomorrow with a bargain batch of French sardines or Astrakhan caviar. He buys carefully and sells CHEAP—therefore FAST.

Dust never collects on LOW prices, so his stocks are always fresh and prime.

HE HAS learned the fundamental law of successful merchandising—TO KEEP CAPITAL TURNING. The dollar that earns the most ISN'T the dollar that hangs around the shelf waiting for 50 per cent, but the dollar that goes to market OFTENEST and earns a FEW pennies on every trip.

He's a student in the College of Action, studying commercial methods under Prof. Experience, the world's best educator.

He's a little man who's practising the tricks of Big Business, from the very START.

He's learning efficiency golf, on a twelve by twelve course and getting a swing that will later qualify him for MEDAL play.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD! ∴

By Elsie Robinson

LOTS of hullabaloo because American mothers are not having more children. What's the answer? MAYBE COMMUNITY NURSERIES.

Marie was talking about it the other day. Something she said gave me the clue to this article. Marie's an interesting, bright girl with a genuine ambition to make a success of her marriage. She was married six years ago and will have her first baby in October. She's worried at the prospect.

"People wonder why Ran and I think that perhaps I didn't like children or was afraid of childbirth. But that isn't so. I love children—and I don't think any healthy girl dreads the risk so much. I really want this baby, and so does Ran—BUT WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO WITH HIM AFTER WE GET HIM?

"I ought to go on with my work; we really need the money. We won't have half as fine a future to offer sonny if I drop out now. But it isn't just the money—Ran needs my companionship. We've had it for six years now, and it has been wonderful. He has been a different man. But of course when the baby comes I'll have to devote practically all my time to him for at least three years. I'll have to drop out of Ran's picture, and it's things like that that lead to divorce. Besides—maybe I'm selfish—but I don't want to lose those years of my own life just doing baby chores."

"But your mother had seven, and she and your dad stuck together to the end," I said.

"Yes—but things were different then. Husbands and wives weren't companions in those days, the way they are now. Modern husbands expect 10 times as much from their wives as their fathers did. A woman has to keep up with things nowadays—if she doesn't, she loses her husband. Besides, if she's worth anything, she wants to keep up with things for her own sake.

"And there's another thing. Mother really had a lot of help in raising her children, although she always claimed she didn't. But families stuck closer together then. You could always leave the baby with your relatives or neighbors. But we're 2,000 miles from our nearest relatives and we don't know a soul in our apartment house."

"But just think of the wonderful pleasure you two will have training the baby during that time—" Privately, I was a little shocked at her lack of enthusiasm.

She sat for a long time, thoughtfully, before she answered.

"I suppose we will," she smiled, and the old sweet dreams were in that smile. I felt better! "But people think differently about that part of it, too, nowadays. Mother love—that used to be the great idea. Babies needed mother love more than anything else. But now any doctor, or psychologist, or nurse, or teacher will tell you that mother love is apt to do more harm than good! Mothers are too emotional—and too ignorant. The average mother hasn't a bit of training.

"Dr. Watson says that babies should be taken entirely away from their mothers and put into the hands of experts. But I think that's too radical. Of course, if one could afford a fine nurse that would solve everything. The way they do in England—but nurses are prohibitive here. WOULDN'T IT BE WONDERFUL IF WE COULD HAVE COMMUNITY NURSERIES, AS THEY HAVE IN SOME PLACES, WITH TRAINED NURSES IN ATTENDANCE AND DOCTORS IN CALL, WHERE WE COULD LEAVE OUR BABIES DURING THE DAY, AND OCCASIONALLY AT NIGHT? WHY, I'D BE WILLING TO HAVE A DOZEN BABIES IF I COULD DO THAT."

"And who'd be paying for this Utopia?" I asked.

She shrugged her shoulders—laughed. "The taxpayers, I suppose. But why should that be so terrible? They pay for a lot of other things that aren't needed half as much as babies. Babies are the most important things there is—why shouldn't we keep them up like we do highways and forest reserves?"

I wonder!

Community nurseries—would that really solve the problem of the decreasing birth rate? They'd save money, time and man power; they'd save valuable years and valuable development for weary young mothers and worried young fathers. Above all, they'd probably save the babies themselves from the menace of maternal ignorance and maudlin sentimentality. But would it really boost the population? Would the average American mother have more children if the State gave her a hand?

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

DAUGHTERS, you know, have got a way with their dads. They have a way with other men, too, of course, but the dad is one of the easiest.

Caroline was only 18 when she said to her dad, "And you don't want me to leave you, do you, Daddy?"

"Leave? No, not for years yet!"

"That's what I thought. So I'm marrying Dick Jobless. He's an awful nice boy, and he says he won't mind living here with us for eight or ten years."

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, August 16.—Thoughts while strolling: Those bespectacled young men for whom "Life is serious, life is earnest"—or whatever it is—might have been written. Donald Meek, the actor, whose name describes his stage parts. Initials on cloche hats. Why not telephone numbers?

William Fox, a Tulchva, Hungary, boy, who made good in the city. Those worldlings with puffed out chests and white crests of hair—like cockatoos. Heywood Broun's orange bright tie. Fay Marbe, who gives one person shows on Broadway. Sign: "Dental Crematorium—Cash Pade for Dental Scrap."

The new Chanin Building. What a son of a gun to whitewash! Billy Emmerich, one of the town's favorite bachelors. The peanut brittle ice cream fad. That chemical spray on buildings to keep dogs away. The delicious jellies in the Women's Exchanges. Only Broadway surface cars seem to carry passengers any more.

Bing and Bing, the contractors who bang and bang. Mullion windowed English tap rooms trying to carry on with near beer in leaden tankards. Those lanky women with scrawny necks who carry tennis racquets. What became of scalloped ginger cakes with white icing? Book shop offers: "Books for week-end guests."

Seedy tin type photographers with hang dog looks. Simile: "As subdued as a reformed souse." Jean Eagles' shoulder length coiffure. A subtle dignity about street corner corn doctors. I'm always waving back to street surveyors signaling to rodsmen. Sleeveless, knee length pajamas.

Is there an Alfred Dunhill? Those black bow ties with white knots. The blind woman and her fortune telling white mice. Mrs. Helen Green Van Campen, who used to write colorful stories of Broadway. A former Oxford professor who draws comic strips. Crates of bawling calves—moving to doom.

Six drug store windows in a row and not a drug on display. Rumble-seat neckers. Snooty shops proclaiming themselves as Soandso of London or Paris as though that was hot. The guttery talk of garage loafers. Wonder how a fellow happens to get into novelty dress goods business.

There is the story of the fellow who wandered out of a musical show between acts on Forty-second street, drifted back into the theater next door where a drama was playing. After watching for five minutes, he rushed to a taxi and told the driver to crack a few speed laws getting to the Bellevue psychopathic ward.

Also the stark story of an actress who saw a gentleman across the cafe where she was dining and was curiously attracted. She was in a dinner party with her fourth husband and asked a friend who knew the stranger to be presented. They danced and at the conclusion she walked him over to her husband and said: "Meet my fifth husband." Everybody laughed. Eight months later they were married.

A large popular priced department store recently featured a second edition of Boswell's Life of Johnson at $750, a rare bargain but interesting only to collectors, of whom it attracted a large number. It was effective sales psychology. Many who had never been in the store made purchases and came back again.

Incidentally, a wealthy father has paid $3,000 for a Dickens' chair for a daughter who had an urge to write. He thought the chair might prove an inspiration. We don't know how it came out but a rough guess is it didn't amount to that! My experience and also that of many others is the most effective inspiration to writing is an over due board bill and a heartless landlady.

Three high-class magazines are rejecting every fiction yarn with a night club background. The theme has been worn to a frazzle and accomplished nothing but pages of free publicity for an over exploited hostess who features a contempt for the law—and a boast she cannot be convicted.

Magazine editors—I've been dropping in on editors today—are also keeping eyes peeled for certain expressions in English fiction. On home grounds, they mean nothing but in American slangology they are shocking. Three got past the censors in a magazine recently. And all the newsstands sold out over night.

OH, THESE WOMEN

By Leola Allard

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—A lady who just finished building a new home didn't like it when Joe Laurie, Jr., said that Los Angeles had oodles and oodles of homes built out of glass, chicken wire and tooth paste.

You know the kind.

So he made her a little madder. He said the town was full of Iowans and I. O. U.'s.

But it's easy to make a Los Anglan mad. There, civic pride is never sheathed.

"Dear me," said a colored maid in a Los Angeles apartment building, where it never gets hot, but IS hot never-the-less and notwithstanding, "working in these here compartments this hot weather is just about to make me lose my intelligence."

An impudent hemale, writing of women, says that there are no more shy women. That the former shy girl became the maiden aunt, and that no woman wanting to be a maiden aunt, no woman is shy. "Her duty," sezze, "is to pick out some nice man to make him happy or unhappy for the rest of his life."

"But for man, marriage is often an incident, his work goes on the same except that he has to give up play and silk pajamas."

The Pink Lamas of Packapu, in the Seventh century, according to a guide book to women, by James Janes, tells us that any woman may acquire any man if she knows the way and is prepared to take the consequences. Later, two footnotes were inscribed, probably by those who tested the precept. The first footnote says: "This precept does not apply to rounded females under the age of 11 or over the age of 33." The second note says: "The male is forever looking for trouble of the kind that doesn't wear trousers."

We are given, too, the important reminder: "Women don't mean half they look or ANYTHING they say."

Many of the girls east, west, north and south are stringing themselves with wooden beads. They are cut in every imaginable shape, carved, plain, long, short, thin, thick, combined with bright glass and the shape of watermelon seeds. The wooden things are light weight, and don't mark the neck—though I don't see what difference that makes, for it is always hung with something to cover the marks. Few women are going in for diamonds. "They are just too common," said a young snip, who knew what she was talking about.

But in a beauty parlor yesterday a woman was throwing somebody kisses over the telephone, and she had hundreds of small diamonds on her fingers and wrists, and as many freckles to be covered by them. The diamonds fought the freckles, as they invariably do. You know the kind.

An old man in Omaha is trying to sell a canary diamond. It's a lovely thing, so beautiful that the woman he showed it to, a good woman at that, said if she could have pushed him into the incinerator and run away with the diamond she would have done so. Crime looked like a petty thing to commit for that ring. No one knows where he got it. He has been trying to sell it for a year that she knows of, but won't go to a dealer. I wonder why? If the lady ever gets the $3,000 he won't have to.

Wise Words

Employment, and hardships prevent melancholy. —Johnson.

Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all. —Holmes.

Happiness lies in the consciousness of it, and by no means in the way the future keeps its promises. —Sands.

Many men build as cathedrals were built, the part nearest the ground finished; but that part which soars toward heaven, the turrets and the spires, forever incomplete. —Beecher.

Men's minds are as variant as their faces. Where the motives of their actions are pure, the operation of the former is no more to be imputed to them as a crime than the appearance of the latter; for both, being the work of nature, are alike unavoidable. —George Washington.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

A FRIEND has offered to get you some information you want.

Have you thought how you could reciprocate?

Or do you take all the nice things offered as your due?

You say, "thank you," of course, but it ends there.

You say you don't want kindness if it is done for a return of courtesy.

You don't willingly accept attentions that you know must be paid in kind.

You don't like persons who figure that way.

When you give, you give without thought of return, and that you believe to be true generosity or open-handedness.

Technically you may be right.

But that does not relieve you of the responsibility of showing a spirit of gratefulness by deeds.

Mere words are not all there is to gratefulness.

Real appreciation of kindness translates itself into deeds.

Acts of similar import, evidence of a corresponding liberality, are due from you, whether they are expected or not, if you have been remembered.

Never be caught napping when it comes to visible proof of appreciation for favors received.
